WARSAW IN REVOLT; REIGN OF TERROR FOLLOWS

BULLETIN SAYS HAY IS BETTER

Dr. Scudder Notes Improvement in Case of Secretary, Stricken at Lake Sunapee.

RETURN OF OLD TROUBLE

Special to the Boston American.

NEWBURY, N. H., June 26.—Secretary of State John Hay is somewhat improved from the illness which came suddenly upon him yesterday at his Summer home, The Fells, Lake Sunapee. Dr. Charles L. Scudder, the Boston specialist, who came on a special train at the call of Mrs. Hay, issued this bulletin to-day:

"Mr. Hay is suffering from the effects of a chill contracted on the journey from Washington. The attack is similar to the one he had four years ago. This morning he is resting comfortably and expects to be about in a few days. No further bulletins will be issued."

Dr. Scudder will remain with Mr. Hay until to-morrow at least. He says that he does not anticipate further complications.

Performed Slight Operation.

To-day's relief from dyspepsia, Dr. J. L. Cain of Newport, who was the first physician called, found him in great pain. A slight operation performed by Dr. Cain relieved Mr. Hay greatly.

Dr. Scudder found his patient sleeping when he arrived. He remained at the bedside for some time closely studying the case. It was his first intention to return to Boston and send another surgeon to watch the case. He decided later, however, to remain himself at least until to-morrow.

Dr. Scudder does not believe that a serious operation will be necessary at this time. Mrs. Hay believes that the expert should be in attendance until all dangerous symptoms have passed.

The secretary arrived Saturday night with his son, Mrs. Hay came on Friday and the Summer home was ready for Mr. Hay when he appeared. At that time he looked to be in fairly good health.

Suffered Great Pain.

On Sunday night the attack brought his great agony. Mrs. Hay called Dr. Cain at Newport. Before his arrival the symptoms had become so alarming that Mrs. Hay called Dr. Scudder. There was no way in which he could get to the house until to-day, except by special train. One was ordered, and the Boston & Maine railroad gave it right of way to Concord. It arrived here in less than two hours.

Dr. Cain had arrived in the meantime and by a slight operation so relieved the pain that the secretary was able to sleep. On the arrival of Dr. Scudder, Dr. Cain explained what had been done and left the specialist in charge.

To a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter Dr. Cain explained that the attack was similar to the one which had stricken the secretary's brother, Charles Hay. Asked if an operation would be necessary at this time, Dr. Cain said:

"I do not believe so. The case is now in the hands of Dr. Scudder, however."

Launch in Readiness.

Great alarm was felt about the Hay place when it became known that the Secretary was stricken and that a specialist was coming on a special train. Great preparations were made not to lose a moment in getting him to the Fells. A launch was in readiness and when the surgeon jumped

GIRL STRIKERS ESCAPE BUSSES BY WINDOWS

Doors Barred When They Tried to Leave Mill, but They Find Way.

FALL RIVER, June 26.—One hundred girls employed in the cardrooms of Mill No. 5 and 5 of the Fall River Iron Works Cotton Mills went on strike to-day under the most sensational circumstances. Barred by overseers and inspectors from leaving the building by the doors, the girls swarmed out of the windows and down the fireescapes, while the overseers called for police assistance.

The strike is caused by the refusal of the management to give an advance in wages to the card room employes. But a short time ago the management granted a slight increase to those employed in the ring spinning department, and when the card room girls found that they were not going to share in the increase they held a meeting and decided to strike.

Girls Jeer Bosses.

When time to begin work came every card room girl in mill No. 4 walked out of the shop and stood in the yard, yelling at the top of their voices for the girls in mill No. 5 to join them. The girls hooted the watchmen and foremen of rooms who attempted to drive them back and who entreated them to return to their rooms.

The girls in the cardrooms at Mill No. 5 heard the shouting and decided to leave the mill in a body. They made their way to the stairs leading to the yard. There they found the overseers and foremen blocking the way and demanding that they return to their work. Some of the girls were threatened violence and the police were called.

Finding their way blocked, the girls raised the windows and clambered down the fire escape to the yard, where they joined the other strikers. With wild yells of derision and jeers th girls assumed control of th yard and defied the foremen and other officials to drive them the property of the company.

Police Scatter Strikers.

A squad of police arrived while excitement was at its height. They drove the girls from the yard, while employers from the windows jeered them. The gates were closed, but the girls lingered and awaited action by the management of the mill.

Chairman Tansey of the Board of Police, with the secretary of the cardera association have arranged for a conference over the matter with Superintendent Hathaway of the company.

The iron works mill is the only one from which the employes did not go on strike during the long struggle of last Fall and Winter.

SPEED FINE $10; LOOK FOR OTHERS

The police of Hingham are on a still hunt for a number of auto drivers who raced through the town yesterday. Adelbert A. Thomas of Boston was to-day fined $10 for exceeding the speed limit.

ANOTHER TAUNTON MAN THREATENED IN LETTER

CHARLES NEWBURY RECEIVES THIRD IN SERIES OF BLACKMAILING EPISTLES.

Young Dean Harthorn, son of Professor and Mrs. Harthorn of Taunton, who is now guarded at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Roberts of No. 20 Craigie street, Cambridge, is to be sent to Scarborough Beach, Me., where he will be farther removed from the dangers threatened in the $1,000 blackmailing letter sent his parents.

It was learned to-day that another threatening letter had been sent to a wealthy Taunton man. Charles Newbury. This is the third letter in this extraordinary series. Police Chief Cash, who has been working on the Harthorn and Clemence letters, has learned that the former was written at the Park Hotel, Taunton, and the latter at Taunton City Hospital. The chief is confident of making an arrest in a few days.

Mother Worn and Nervous.

In the latest news dispatches from Taunton stress is laid on the effect that the strain of this case is having on Mrs. Harthorn, mother of the lad whose life has been threatened. To-day she drove through the shopping district, calling at several markets. She looked worn and nervous.

Several friends stopped her and expressed their sympathy for her and her family. Mrs. Harthorn talked about the case and discussed guardedly some suspicious she entertains, and which have been strengthened from the talks with the police.

Chief Cash has Lieutenant McCormick devoting his entire time to the case. The lieutenant is one of the most experienced men in the Taunton police. The first theory, that the person who wrote the Harthorn letter was the same one who wrote to William Wood, has been abandoned.

In regard to the threatening letter received by Charles Newbury, the police are reticent. It is only known so far that Mr. Newbury received a letter of that nature and that he immediately put the matter in Chief Cash's hands.

Boy Is in Cambridge.

At the Cambridge home of Mr. and Mrs. Roberts close watch is being kept on Dean Harthorn, prior to dispatching him to Scarborough Beach. Mrs. Roberts was asked to-day if Dean had gone away.

"He is still here," she said.

Asked about the Scarborough Beach plans the grandmother said:

"I cannot discuss the matter now."

NOTED IRISH-AMERICAN DIES

William Feard, a prominent builder and business man of the Dorchester district, died suddenly early to-day of heart disease, at his home No. 84 East street.

Mr. Feard was one of the foremost Irish Americans of this section, an intimate friends of the late John Boyle O'Reilly and of Mayor Collins. The Mayor once offered him the position of Superintendent of Public Buildings, but he declined. He was a member of the Catholic Union, St. Vincent de Paul Society and other Catholic organizations.

The forecast is fair to-night and Tuesday, cooler Tuesday; light variable winds, generally northwest.

Barricades Thrown Up in Streets of Polish Capital, Red Flag Unfurled and People Prepare to Fight to the Death—Lodz in Grip of Cossacks After Awful Massacre and Thousands Flee From Death City.

WARSAW, June 26—The whole city is in open revolt. Jewish residents of this city have armed themselves, erected barricades of overturned street cars at various points and are in concerted and determined revolt against the military authorities.

Although the Cossacks and dragoons are stationed all over the city their presence has served to further inflame the minds of the excited people, and crowds bent upon resistance are constantly being augmented.

A furious battle, in which the awful scenes enacted at Lodz may be repeated, is imminent. The city is in the throes of mingled anger and fright. All the business houses have been closed. Street car and other traffic has stopped. Residents who have not been bold enough to join the working people in the street are hiding in fear of the result in their homes. The red banner of the Socialists is displayed over some of the barricades.

The citizens have chosen the corner of Ogrodowa and Zelazua streets to make their stand. Nearly all of them are armed with rifles. There are thirty-four battalions of infantry in Warsaw. The attack, which is expected at any time upon the impromptu fortications, will prove of a very deadly character.

BOMB THROWN AT POLICE.

Few shots have been fired as yet. These have been generally from the barricaded workmen directed at men who were on their way to the factories with the intention of going to work. The slightest altercation between the troops and the armed workmen is sure to bring on a clash.

At Czenstochau it has just been learned a bomb was thrown at the chief of police as he was riding through the street in a carriage. The policeman and seven civilians were severely hurt. It is not known here whether or not the bomb-thrower was caught.

This gives an idea of the temper of the people here and throughout this section of Russia. The workmen are determined to avenge the slaughter of their brothers and sisters at Lodz, even though they fall victims themselves to the guns of the Cossacks and dragoons.

REVOLT IS SPREADING.

The revolutionary spirit, incited by the summary action of the soldiers, is rampant and is spreading. It stops temporarily at one place, only to break out with equal ferocity at another. The men are acting apparently under a central management, and before the end comes it is believed Russia will have to face the most serious phase of the present war with her own people at home.

CADET SHIP IS SUNK IN CRASH, 22 BOYS DROWN

Danish Craft Rammed by a British Steamer Near Copenhagen.

COPENHAGEN, June 26.—Twenty-two cadets were drowned and fifty-seven rescued last night when the Danish cadet training schooner Georgestage was rammed and sunk by the British steamer Ancona. The Georgestage sank in one and one-half minutes.

The Ancona was considerably damaged along her waterline. The port authorities have placed an embargo on the Ancona, which will remain here until the inquiry into the collision is completed.

All the boys were in their berths when the accident happened. The sky was overcast, but objects could still be seen at considerable distance. Fifty-seven of the cadets were rescued, but the fact that the Georgestage went down inside of a minute and a half after she was struck, made it impossible to get the rest of the boat. Only one boy has been recovered so far by divers.

FREED ON CHARGE OF SUNDAY BALL

Morris F. Cargill and Jacob [illegible], both of Boston, who were arrested [illegible] Peabody, on the charge of playing baseball on Sunday, were discharged to-day by Judge Bruce. The officers testified they saw one man throw a ball to the other.

ITALIAN SHOT WOMAN; HELD FOR RESULT

Charge Against Woburn Man Will Be Manslaughter If She Does Not Recover.

Awaiting the outcome of a serious wound inflicted upon Mrs. Clara Strables of No. 9 Monroe street, Woburn, who is at the Massachusetts General Hospital in a critical condition, the case of Alphonse Pedesco, forty-five years old, who was arraigned in the Woburn Police Court to-day, charged with the shooting, was continued to July 6.

Pedesco was held in $1,000 bonds and being unable to furnish the amount, was remanded to jail. He is charged with assault with a dangerous weapon, but the police say that, in the event of the woman's death, the charge will be changed to one of manslaughter.

The police allege that Pedesco had trouble with Mrs. Strables, who was his boarding mistress, and that he flourished a revolver. The woman ordered him to put it away, and he refused. In the scuffle which followed the revolver was discharged. The bullet passing through Pedesco's left hand and into the body of Mrs. Strables.

MOTHER KILLS CHILDREN.

GRAND LAKE, Col., June 26.—Mrs. Watt C. Gregg shot and killed her four young children and tried to end her own life to-day while mentally unbalanced. She is in a serious condition.

INVOLVED IN SCANDAL, THEY CHARGE PLOT

Canadian of High Standing Arrested and Wishes to Protect Society Woman.

SHE IS HIDING IN POVERTY

NEW YORK, June 26.—Connected with the arrest and detention in the Tombs of Captain Reginald Salmon, former Wreck Commissioner of the Dominion of Canada, is an international scandal which involves Mary Beatrice Spain, the wife of Captain Osprey G. V. Spain, for many years a social leader in Ottawa and a close personal friend of Lord and Lady Minto.

Young Salmon is a cousin of Vice-Admiral Salmon, retired, of the royal British navy, and a nephew of Sir Arthur Denny, Bart. Into the scandal is dragged the name also of Raymond Prefontaine, the Canadian Minister of Marine. Captain Spain is the present Canadian Wreck Commissioner and commander of Canadian cruisers.

Mrs. Spain is in this city living in poverty at No. 151 Second avenue, separated from her husband. Salmon is held in arrest under an almost obsolete section of the Penal Code charging him with impersonating the husband of the woman and living with her as Captain Spain. A further charge of attempted illegal treatment of Mrs. Spain is made against Salmon, and upon this he is held, together with Dr. Andrew Fulton of Brooklyn, for action of the grand jury.

Victims of Plot.

Salmon and Mrs. Spain deny all the charges made against them, and reply with counter charges alleging that a plot was hatched in Ottawa to wreck the career of the young man and blight the name of the woman. Salmon has not told any of his aristocratic friends of his arrest, and they will be shocked to find that he is a prisoner with such charges hanging over him.

To a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN Mrs. Spain told of the downfall of Salmon in Canadian political circles. She said:

"When Captain Salmon assumed office Captain Spain was his best friend. They were together always. Within a few weeks Captain Spain had persuaded Captain Salmon to enter a housekeeping arrangement, Salmon to pay the rent in one of the finest residences in Ottawa, we to provide the table and run the house generally. I was not enthusiastic, preferring my smaller home and entirely satisfied with the position I was securely maintaining in society.

Spain Loved a Splurge.

"But Captain Spain dearly loved a splurge. He yearned for the biggest house in Ottawa and saw in the plan of combination with Captain Salmon an easy way of getting it. So, against my advice, the arrangement went into effect and we were speedily domiciled in one of the handsomest residences in the Canadian capital. For a time Captain Spain was in his element and the proudest man in the Dominion.

"With nothing but his slender duties in the Protective Fishery service, and his still more slender work as commander of Canadian cruisers to occupy his time, he took to drinking heavily. His real purpose in life at this time was to devise ways and means for social display. They were silly. Ottawa society realized what was going on, laughed openly at my husband and treated me with the deep consideration and unwavering kindness which will ever be cherished among my fondest memories.

"Matters were in this almost unbearable shape for me when Captain Salmon's troubles began with the Minister of Marine. The collision of the two steamships, the Canada and the Cape Breton, on the St. Lawrence River last year was an appalling disaster, which shocked all Canada.

Inquiry Caused Trouble.

"Just what Captain Salmon did in this case to offend the Minister of Marine and the powerful ring which dominates the marine interest of Canada may be told in a few words.

"Following the regular departmental course he organized his court and as wreck commissioner proceeded to an investigation. One of the ships was owned by the Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Company, which was represented by the Montreal law firm of Archer, Perron & Taschereau. Minister Prefontaine, before his elevation to the Dominion Cabinet, had been a member of this firm.

"Captain Salmon alleges, and the large majority of intelligent Canadians believe, that he was approached before the conclusion of the trial by an official in the marine service representing Prefontaine and sounded as to his probable decision. When it was learned that that decision was certain to be against the ship represented by Prefontaine's old law firm, he received a telegram signed by the Deputy Minister of Marine as follows:

" 'Minister desires nothing further to be done until further orders from him.'

Abused by Her Husband.

"Before this Captain Spain, nearly crazed by drink, had subjected me to treatment which menaced my very life. I was ill, suffering from an affliction which has made of me a chronic invalid for the last six years, and his wild conduct and abusiveness brought me to the verge of nervous collapse. In those bitter days my fifteen-year-old son was a wonderful comfort. In his boyish way he did all that a son could do for a sorely tried mother.

"So also did Captain Salmon, remonstrating with my husband when he abused me, and seeking in a thousand different ways to render my unhappy lot at least bearable.

"All this was known to the best people in Ottawa. Lady Minto brought me a sustaining comfort that bridged me over wretched scenes of domestic affliction under which without her friendship I would have surely collapsed.

"F. Gourdeau, Deputy Minister of Marine, posing at the time as my most sympathetic friend, caused the government to interfere, and Captain Spain was admonished that unless he submitted to the gold cure he would be summarily dismissed from the service.

Captains Come to Blows.

"He took the cure, but it failed to work. The culminating crash came one day when I lay ill in an upper room of my home attended by my little son. Captain Spain entered the house, from which he had been absent for days on a spree. Standing in the lower hall, he drove the frightened maids out of the way and at the top of his voice thundered an order for me to come down stairs at once. Ill and panic-stricken, I was literally without the strength to obey. My boy boldly ran into the hall, confronted his infuriated father and cried: 'Mamma cannot come. She is ill. If you wish to see her go to her.'

"Like a madman Captain Spain rushed upstairs and dashed into my room. Captain Salmon had entered the house a few moments before, and hearing the uproar recognized my peril and rushed to my assistance.

"The two men met in my room. Captain Spain, shrieking threats of murder, struck Captain Salmon a powerful blow in the face, and in the confusion that followed my senses reeled, and I knew no more. But there was a desperate battle. Captain Spain, tall and powerfully built and crazed by liquor, fought like a madman, and Captain Salmon, much the smaller, but strengthened by a just cause, whipped him soundly."

STOLE FROM WOMAN, GIVEN TWO MONTHS

BABY ELMA YOUNG TO TESTIFY IN CHILD-MURDER HEARING AT DIGBY

KINGSLEY MELANSON'S HOUSE.

BABY ELMA YOUNG.

KINGSLEY MELANSON

CHILD WITNESS; ONF OF THE DEFENDANTS.

Child of 18 Months to Be Witness Against Her Mother, Hope Young, in Nova Scotia.

Elmer Young and Marie Ward, Father and Mother of Dead Girl, to Be Called Also.

Special to the Boston American.

DIGBY, N. S., June 26.—Crown Prosecutor Dennison and Sheriff Burnham worked the greater part of the night and will be busy all day to-day putting together the evidence which is to be presented at the hearing of Hope Young and Kingsley Melanson to-morrow. Counsel for the woman will make strong efforts to secure her release on the ground that there is not the slightest evidence to connect her with the murder of six-year-old Mary Ward.

The hearing is set for 9 o'clock to-morrow morning. A big crowd is expected from Plympton and other towns, where the case has attracted much attention. It is possible that the hearing may have to be adjourned to larger quarters.

Marie Ward and Elmer E. Young will be the star witnesses for the prosecution. Miss Ward, who came here voluntarily and announced that she was the mother of the murdered child, is expected to tell some things which will throw light on the lives of Hope Young and Elmer Young.

Baby to Be Witness.

Another witness will be the eighteen-months-old child of Hope Young, little Elma, who, Elmer Young admits, is his daughter. The child was found alive in the woods after having been tied nearly twenty-four hours, and has regained her health despite terrible suffering.

Little Elma is a bright child and can talk in a baby way. As yet there have been no efforts made by the prosecution to have the child tell who it was that tied her in the woods. The defence will endeavor to have any evidence that may come from the child stricken out.

Other witnesses will be those of the searching party who found the two children gagged and bound in the woods, Elma barely alive and Mary dead. They will also tell how Hope Young behaved when she accompanied the people on the search.

Expect Scene in Court.

Agnes Mack and Hattie Hatfield will be in court and may be called upon to tell what they know about the relations between Elmer Young and Hope Young. Marie Ward is anxious to tell her story, and it is expected that there will be a scene when she faces the prisoners.

Kingsley Melanson is not believed to know anything about the murder and the authorities are convinced that he has told the truth.

Young has said that if he can get out of jail he will make a sensation. "Not till I get out will I tell what I know," he said. He expected that the State Department at Washington would take cognizance of the protests which he has made through the consuls at Yarmouth and Digby and appeared surprised when he heard nothing to-day.

It is not believed by the Crown Prosecutor that there will be any extended inquiry by the State Department when the facts are made known to them.

THOUSANDS FLEE FROM DEATH CITY

down scores of innocent men and women in this city, 12,000 residents have fled from Lodz, and the outgoing trains are jammed with the frightened populace.

Re-enforced by additional troops from Warsaw, General Schutleowrth, commander of this district, has succeeded for the time being, at least, in overawing the workingmen.

The people of the city have been driven into their houses, where they cower in fear of being shot down by the parading soldiers if they show themselves in the street. Should any citizen be compelled to leave his home, it is necessary to get permission or run the chance of death from a dragoon gun or Cossack sword.

CITY AN ARMED CAMP.

Lodz to-day is an armed camp. All kinds of business are at a standstill. Not a shop is open. To-day the authorities were able to make a more careful estimate of the terrible slaughter that took place during the latter part of last week. These are the figures:

Dead, 561.

Severely wounded, over 700.

Slightly hurt, but able to get to their homes, a number sufficient to raise the total to 2,100, as was first estimated.

In some of the suburban districts the troops have been unusually brutal in their action. At Baluty a family of Jews was in a carriage on their way to the railway station to escape when they were attacked by a squadron of Cossacks and every member of the family, as well as the coachman, was shot to death.

PEOPLE WILD WITH FRIGHT.

The news of this outrage has greatly inflamed the population of that section. The people are wild with fright and do not know which way to turn. Most of them are hiding in their homes, fearing to even attempt to leave the place lest they, too, fall victims of the mounted soldiers.

A serious clash took place between the police and the workmen at Pabjanice. When the fight was over it was found that one policeman had been killed and the other seriously injured. Several citizens were injured.

The Government suffered severely in the fights in this city. Thirty-five liquor stores were destroyed and all of the cash and stamps were taken. The money will be used to help the determined fight that is being carried on against the rule of the Czar.

RUSSIA SELECTS PEACE ENVOYS TO WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, June 26.—It is reported unofficially that President Roosevelt has been informed by Mr. Meyer, the American ambassador at St. Petersburg, of the selection of the Russian peace plenipotentiaries.

It is now believed that the first meeting of the plenipotentiaries will be in this city during the first week or ten days of August.

That M. Nelidoff, Russian ambassador to France, will be one of the Russian plenipotentiaries, and Baron Rosen, the newly appointed ambassador to the United States, the other, is generally believed to be the fact.

Russia's nomination of her plenipotentiaries has relieved apprehension here. Japan has been ready to name her envoys for several days, and has been suspicious because Russia did not name those who would negotiate for the Czar. As a guarantee of good faith, Japan demanded that Russia should name her envoys first. This has now been done.

Japan is ready to name her plenipotentiaries also. There is reason to believe that the President knows who they will be. Kogoro Takahira, the Japanese minister, is not an improbability for this important duty. Marquis Ito, the "grand old man of Japan," could represent his government at the Washington conference if he so desired, but, because of his health, is not expected. Field Marshal Yamagata is the next most probable choice.

President Roosevelt has given up hope that an armistice will be concluded before the plenipotentiaries meet.

JAPS DEFEAT RUSSIAN FORCE OF 3,000 MEN

Special Cable to Boston American.

TOKIO, June 26.—An official dispatch states that the enemy, holding an eminence northwest of Nanshuncentzu, were attacked and dislodged on the afternoon of June 22, but a portion of the enemy holding the hills made a stubborn resistance.

The position was finally taken by assault. The Japanese attacked another force holding the hills one north of their front.

At this same time a turning movement from the northeast was resorted to, by which the Russian's retreat was intercepted, causing them heavy loss. The enemy was thrown into confusion and hoisted a red flag. This did not stop the Japanese fire. The Russians fled northward in disorder.

The enemy's strength was 3,000 cavalry and infantry, with several guns. Their losses were fully 200. Fifty dead were counted on the field. The Japanese losses were insignificant.

The British India Steam Navigation Company's steamer Ikhoma was sunk by the Russian cruiser Terek June 5, 150 miles north of Hong Kong.

In the class will graduate several of the young women of the New England champion basket ball team, among them being Miss Anna Brown, Miss Ruth Bailey, Miss Elizabeth Spalding and Miss Bessie Walsh.

This year's class is noted for its pretty girls. In this respect it probably holds the record for the school. A large per cent. of the young women will go to college. Miss Ruth Bailey, holder of the world's record for girls in basket ball, will go to Mount Holyoke.

MRS. DUFF GIVES NORMAL GRADUATES DIPLOMAS TO-DAY

The graduating class of the Boston Normal School held its graduating exercises at the school hall to-day before a large audience.

The program opened with a hymn sung by the entire class after which the Rev. Edward Cummings addressed the graduates on "The Art of Living."

After another hymn by the students Mrs. Julia Duff of the School Committee, presented the diplomas. Head Master Wallace C. Boyden spoke of the pleasant relations which had existed during the years that they had spent under him and wished them all success.

The class next sang the "Lost Chord," after which Mr. Walter Parker, supervisor of schools, made a short address.

BELIEVE LOST GIRL IN TRANCE IN THE WOODS

Hundreds Scour Forest for Zoa White, Missing Since Wednesday.

SUBJECT TO CATALEPSY

GLOUCESTER, June 26.—That Zoa Allen White, the "trance girl," as she is known here, who has been missing from the home of her sister, Mrs. Joseph Balcombe, since last Wednesday, is in a cataleptic state somewhere in the woods between this city and Rockport is the belief of her friends and relatives.

Miss White is subject to attacks of catalepsy, and last Fall, while at Ipswich, became unconscious, and remained in a trance for fourteen days.

Hundreds of Gloucester men searched the woods all day for the missing woman, but not a clue was found.

The search is going on to-day in the hope that, if the girl is in a trance, some of the searchers may find her unconscious body in the woods.

May Never Be Found.

Those who do not hold to the cataleptic theory think Miss White will never be recovered alive.

It has been learned that Miss White had planned to go to the circus the Monday evening before she disappeared with a Frenchman, a fellow-countryman of hers, named Israel Sonia, and was much disappointed over the failure of her escort to appear at the place where she supposed she was to meet him.

On that evening she did not come home until 11 o'clock. When Mrs. Balcomb asked where she had been she replied: "I have been to the circus with a French fellow."

Some people said they had seen her at the circus, but when questioned those people explained that they did not see her, but that Zoa had been at the circus and had talked of going at the factory. Tuesday evening she did not get home until 8 o'clock.

Did Not Go to Circus.

Sonia, when asked about the matter, said:

"I knew Zoa White, who is about my age. We went to school together in our home in Nova Scotia, but I had not seen her for some years. Two years ago, when I lived on Cedar street with my wife and family, she used to stop on her way from work and talk with me and my woman.

"I did not again see her until three weeks ago last Thursday, when she asked me to take her to the circus. I told her I would. I met her again Thursday evening, June 15, shortly after 6 o'clock, on the railroad, near Sargent street. I did not stop to talk with her, but she spoke about the circus, and I said I would take her if she was at the gate. I was at the circus grounds, and as she was not there, I went in without her."

3 LIVES SAVED BY POLICEMAN IN SAME DAY

Patrolman Tarbox of Lynn Rescues Boys From Drowning in Flax Pond.

LYNN, June 26.—Three boys were saved from drowning at Flax Pond, Glenmere, by the heroic work of Patrolman F. Dudley Tarbox.

The rescued lads were John Sullivan, sixteen years old, of Groveland street; George Pardee, seventeen years old, of Wheeler street, and Allen Thompson, eight years old.

John Sullivan, the first one to be rescued, started with James Kelley to swim across the lake, a distance of half a mile. When in the centre of the lake Sullivan threw up his hands and sank. Patrolman Tarbox, hearing Sullivan scream, jumped into a boat and rowed to the spot. The boy was going down for the third time when the patrolman grabbed him. Sullivan kicked and fought, and Tarbox ducked him and then pulled him into the boat.

The second time the patrolman was called into action was near the beach when eight-year-old Allen Thompson sank in a quicksand. Tarbox rushed into the water and dragged the boy to shore.

George Pardee was seized with cramps about fifteen feet from shore. He was brought ashore by Fred Batchelder, and Tarbox worked over him until he revived.

FOR FIVE DAYS FISHING, $3,740

For five days work the crew of the fishing schooner Nellie E. Dixon will receive $3,740. The vessel left T Wharf last Wednesday and returned to-day with 22,000 mackerel. The fish were caught off Southwest Georges.

UNSIGHTLY BALD SPOT

Caused by Sores on Neck. Merciless Itching For Two Years Made Him Wild.

ANOTHER CURE BY CUTICURA

"For two years my neck was covered with sores, the humor spreading to my hair, which fell out, leaving an unsightly bald spot, and the soreness, inflammation, and merciless itching made me wild. Friends advised Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after a few applications the torment subsided, to my great joy. The sores soon disappeared, and my hair grew again, as thick and healthy as ever. I shall always recommend Cuticura. (signed) H. J. Spalding, 104 W. 104th St., New York City."

$7,000 AWARDED TO PADEREWSKI

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 26.—Ignace Paderewski accepts $7,000 for the injury to his arm in a railroad accident at Syracuse last April, and says he is satisfied. This amount is not as much as he would have received from any one of his American engagements which he was obliged to cancel, but he takes it rather than stay in America to testify. After the accident the great pianist suffered from neuritis and a general breakdown of the nervous system.

The railroad authorities are particularly happy over this settlement. It has been estimated that Paderewski can earn at least $30,000,000 between now and the time when he is seventy years old. All this would have been taken into account in an action against the road for damages.

SPECIALISTS GO TO SUNAPEE ON A SPECIAL

It is known that the disease from which Mr. Hay is suffering is not that which took him across the water recently, where he went to the famous baths. On that trip alarming symptoms developed. Great apprehension was felt in Washington.

He came back to Washington apparently improved. He had not been at the Fells twenty-four hours, however, before the collapse came.

It is understood now that Secretary Hay will be attended for some time by a specialist, who will closely watch every condition of his health. Before Dr. Scudder leaves another Boston physician will arrive. Should it be decided that the ailment can only be treated by an operation, arrangements can quickly be made to have one performed.

Clarence Hay in Attendance.

Mr. Clarence Hay is in attendance upon his father, and there are three of the Hay grandchildren in the house. They arrived with Mrs. Hay on Friday and intend to remain all Summer. Clarence Hay remained in Washington to accompany his father to the Fells.

WENT ABROAD FOR HIS HEALTH; MUCH IMPROVED

Secretary of State John Hay has had a number of serious illnesses in the past five years, and on more than one occasion his life has been despaired of.

The most serious illness previous to the one which recently required his extended European trip, was in August, 1900, at his country home, "The Fells", Lake Sunapee, N. H., where he is now confined to his bed. At that time he was completely prostrated as the result of overwork, and a severe cold which he contracted.

He had several relapses, and his son, Adelbert Hay, then consul at Pretoria, South Africa, was hastily summoned to his bedside. At that time no constitutional difficulty had appeared, and complete rest was the only thing required.

Secretary Hay's recovery from this illness was very slow, and it was several weeks before he resumed his work in the Cabinet.

He continued in fair health until early in December, 1903, when a heavy cold developed into bronchitis, and he was forced to take to his bed. He was attended by Surgeon General Rixey, and in a month was at his desk again.

At this time it was reported that he was suffering from an incurable disease. This proved to be only one of the secretary's jokes. He had told a friend that his disease never could be cured, and when asked to define it explained that it was "old age." He is now sixty-seven years old.

In October of last year he was in Boston, to visit his brother, Charles G. Hay, who was ill, and appeared quite fatigued.

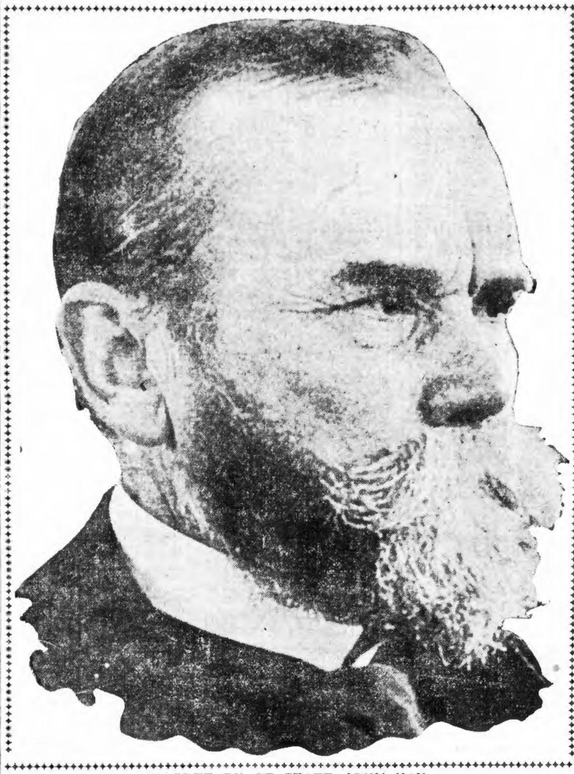

During the past winter a functional disorder of the heart developed and the organ became much dilated. He collapsed a number of times in Washington and an ocean voyage and European trip was arranged for the benefit of his health. He was carried on board the steamer Cretic in a wheeled chair and collapsed immediately.

He hovered between life and death for several days while on the passage, and at one time was practically given up. Mrs. Hay, who had watched by his bedside unceasingly, also collapsed on the second day out, and was put to bed.

The sea voyage worked wonders with Mr. Hay, and when the Azores were reached he was much improved. At Genoa, Gibraltar and other ports he showed continued improvement, and when he reached Bad Nauheim, Germany, he was reported as "a well man." The dilation of the heart had disappeared, and he looked forward to his return to work with a keen interest.

Secretary Hay returned to America on June 16, after a four-months' trip. He appeared to be in excellent health.

The report of his present illness comes with startling suddenness, as it has been understood that he was rapidly recovering his old-time strength and health.

SECRETARY OF STATE JOHN HAY.

HOUSE STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

Roof Torn From Home of Jacob Elz in Jamaica Plain, but No One Hurt.

A lightning bolt drove the family of Jacob G. Elz in panic from the two-story dwelling house at No. 32 Mozart street, Jamaica Plain, early to-day, when it struck the roof with a terrific crash. Neighbors heard the noise as the roof was ripped up and shattered and immediately afterward there was a terrific peal of thunder.

In a moment the street was thronged with frightened residents of the vicinity. They saw flames curling up from the roof of the Elz home, and at first feared that some of the occupants of the house had been killed. All escaped the bolt, but received a nervous shock which left them dazed and trembling. The firemen put out the blaze in a few minutes and the loss is trifling.

GIRLS IN PANIC; FIRE IN SHOP

Fire to-day in the tailor shop of N. Davidson, No. 47 Lagrange street, caused a small panic among the girls employed in the Touraine glove factory adjoining. The upsetting of a bottle of naphtha caused the blaze, which set fire to a pile of clothing. When Davidson tried to throw the clothes into the street the flames were seen by one of the girls, who sounded an alarm and there was a scramble for the street. The damage was slight.

GRANDSON TO DEFENCE OF WM. A. ROCKEFELLER

Denies Charge That Father of Oil King Was Once Pal of Horse Thieves.

"The Usual Lies," Says W. G. Rockefeller in a Vigorous Statement.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 26.—William G. Rockefeller, the grandson of William A. Rockefeller, the father of John D. Rockefeller, declares that the statement made by Miss Ida M. Tarbell in her article in McClure's Magazine of this month, extracts from which were printed in yesterday's SUNDAY AMERICAN, to the effect that the eldest Rockefeller was in league with horse thieves in his younger days and was indicted for an offence worse than horse stealing, is not true.

William G. Rockefeller, who is said to be one of the brainiest of the younger men in the Standard Oil Company, would not go into a detailed denial, but simply characterized the statements of Miss Tarbell relative to his grandfather as "the usual lies they print." He added that his grandfather is still living in South Dakota and that he would be able to confront the accusations himself.

Called Up on Telephone.

An AMERICAN reporter called Mr. Rockefeller upon the telephone at his home in Greenwich, Ct. Mr. Rockefeller answered the telephone himself, and the following interview took place:

"I am Mr. Rockefeller," said he. "What do you want?"

"The BOSTON AMERICAN," said the reporter, "will be glad to print any statement or answer you may make concerning the recent charges made by Miss Tarbell in her recent magazine article."

"I haven't read it," replied Mr. Rockefeller.

"I am referring to the first chapters of the 'Life of John D. Rockefeller,' by Miss Tarbell," said the reporter.

"Well," said Mr. Rockefeller, "what about them?"

"Just the Usual Lies," He Said.

"Miss Tarbell charges," continued the reporter, "that Mr. John D. Rockefeller's father was 'sportively inclined,' was indicted 'for a more serious crime than horse stealing,' and that he was 'the leader in all that was reckless and wild in the community and was classed by the respectable and steady going as a dangerous character.'"

Mr. Rockefeller paused a minute and then said:

"It is just the usual lies they print."

"Will you not make a more detailed statement?" asked the reporter.

"Why don't you see Mr. Rockefeller?" suggested Mr. Rockefeller.

"Do you mean Mr. John D. Rockefeller?"

"No. The old gentleman," replied Mr. Rockefeller.

"Why, is Mr. William A. Rockefeller, John D. Rockefeller's father, living?" asked the reporter.

"He certainly is," was the reply.

"In New York?"

Living in South Dakota.

"No; somewhere in South Dakota, I think. But I am not certain. I do not feel that I should speak either for him or my uncle, since they are alive to speak for themselves."

"Will it be possible to get a statement from your father?" was the next question.

"My father is in Europe," said Mr. Rockefeller, "but I don't think he would say any more than I have said."

"When will he return?"

"Shortly, now."

"And is it his intention to go at once to his Adirondack estate?"

"I think so."

"Despite the threats that have been made against him there?"

"Let me give you a word of advice about that," said Mr. Rockefeller. "Don't you print any of those stories that are sent from up there about threats against my father. I know that the people up there are laughing at them."

"Afraid of Threat? Not a Bit."

"And your father, isn't he afraid?"

"Not a bit," replied Mr. Rockefeller, closing the interview.

William G. Rockefeller, who upon this occasion spoke for the family in denying Miss Tarbell's charges, is the son of William Rockefeller, who is a brother of John D. Rockefeller, and the most active man in the Standard Oil Company next to the Oil King himself.

William Rockefeller has been made the subject of some of the most bitter attacks by Thomas W. Lawson in his articles on "Frenzied Finance," and it was only recently that Mr. Lawson spoke of William G. Rockefeller, who granted the interview to the AMERICAN as one of the most decent and brainiest of the younger men in the Standard Oil circle.

Charges Denied by Grandson of William A. Rockefeller

Miss Ida M. Tarbell says of William A. Rockefeller, the father of John D. Rockefeller:

"The reputation he had built up in Richford as a 'sporting man' was duplicated in Moravia. He soon became the leader in all that was reckless and wild in the community, and was classed by the respectable and steady-going as a dangerous character, on whom no doubt much was fastened that did not belong.

"It may be for this reason, as well as because of his frequent long and unaccounted-for absences, that he is still classed popularly in Moravia as one of the gang who operated the 'underground horse railroad'—and ran off horses from various parts of the country.

"There is absolutely no proof of this, but the conviction and sentence to the State prison, in 1850, of three of his closest pals for horse stealing, coupled with his bad reputation, made many of his disapproving neighbors fix the crime equally on him, and to-day old men in Moravia nod their heads sagely and say, 'He was too smart to be caught.'

"There is an indictment against William A. Rockefeller for a more serious crime than horse-stealing in the records of the county for 1849, and it is quite probable that he left Moravia under compulsion."

SICK WOMAN IN PERIL AT FIRE

Unable to move hand or foot, Mrs. Bertha B. Gaines, a paralytic, who lives at No. 32 Magnolia street, Malden, had a narrow escape from suffocation as she lay in bed early to-day. The chimney of the house had become overheated and set fire to the woodwork. Her room was full of thick smoke when the fire was discovered by a neighbor, Mrs. Mary Waldron, who told her son-in-law, F. I. Titus, of it.

Titus rang the alarm and broke down the door of Mrs. Gaines's home. He groped his way through the house, arousing the inmates, and found Mrs. Gaines in bed, her room filled with dense smoke. Titus carried Mrs. Gaines down stairs to the piazza in his arms, and then went back to rescue Mrs. Gaines's sister.

The damage by the fire is about $600.

SULTAN ADDS FUEL TO FIRE OVER MOROCCO

By Granting Concession to a German Company He Makes Crisis Acute.

POSSIBILITIES OF WAR

LONDON, June 26.—The correspondent of the Daily Chronicle at Tangier says it is reported that the Sultan of Morocco has granted a concession for a port at Azerud, at the mouth of the Wadi-El-Kus River, on the Algerian frontier, to a German company.

If this is true it means a new element of danger in the Moroccan tangle. France claims a nominal protectorate over Morocco, and the establishment of a German concession at Azerud would be a menace to French supremacy in northern Africa.

Berlin Not so Belligerent.

Alarm over a possible French-German conflict is still intense in both Berlin and Spain, although the German newspapers are not so belligerent. Berlin's reply is expected in Paris Wednesday. Germany is now understood to be working for a conference with France that will do away with the plan for an international conference.

While the interest in the war prospects is at high pitch in both capitals, the Kaiser, at Keil, yesterday delivered a sermon on the Hohenzollern, sailed a yacht race and entertained scores of guests in the most amiable manner.

Public Anxiety Intense.

The statement that Germany would refrain from replying before further verbal explanations took place between Premier Rouvier and Prince Radolin, the German Ambassador, is not regarded seriously in well-informed circles, where it is thought probable than an interview will not take place before Wednesday.

Meanwhile public anxiety relative to eventualities is still intense. The press continues to advise patience and confidence in the efforts of the French Government to arrive at a pacific settlement.

FRENCH ANXIOUS TO CONTROL THE SULTAN BY LOAN

NEWPORT, R. I., June 26.—Ion Perdicaris, who was captured by the bandit Raisuli and held a prisoner in Morocco by the native chieftain, is visiting Admiral Chadwick, by whom he was rescued, at Twin Oaks. Mr. Perdicaris, who is thoroughly familiar with the Moroccan question now agitating France and Germany, to-day gave his opinion as to the real points at issue in the dispute. Said he:

"England, France, Germany, Austria, Spain, Belgium and the United States all stand upon an equal footing in Morocco. The Madrid treaty of 1880 made each of the contracting powers a favored nation in Morocco.

Loan of $50,000,000.

"The French are anxious to get financial control in Morocco, and last Summer succeeded in driving the Moroccan Government into accepting a loan for $50,000,000, the first foreign loan Morocco ever contracted. The 5 per cent. interest was guaranteed from the Morocco customs, and the French were permitted to place inspectors in the custom houses. Beyond this, Morocco guaranteed France no special right above and beyond the other signatories of the Madrid treaty.

"The difficulties surrounding the Sultan of Morocco have been made greater since 1902. Then a pretender to the Moroccan throne appeared. It was commonly supposed that this pretender drew his supplies largely from France. After he had inflicted a series of defeats upon the Sultan's troops, a special French Embassy was sent up to Fez from Tangier to induce the Sultan, in return for further loans, to submit to French control of the expenditures of the Moroccan Government.

"They thought and hoped in France that French officers could thus be appointed to administer the various departments of Morocco's treasury. They had overlooked the fact that according to the treaty rights of the other signatories the Sultan was not in a position to refuse similar advantages to each or any other participant in the Madrid convention.

Germany Not Blind.

"Germany, however, was not blind to the opportunity which this circumstance afforded and was thus enabled to inflict a mortifying check upon both France and England, which, together with Spain, were pleased to imagine themselves the only nations entitled to influence the political destinies of Morocco.

"The inhabitants were outraged by the proposition to dispose of their future without consulting the wishes of the country itself and therefore were delighted at the Kaiser's intervention. They may possibly welcome a collective intervention of the powers signatory to the Madrid treaty, with a view to establishing order and developing the resources of a country so rich in endowments of soil and climate."

TELLS RADCLIFFE GIRLS TO WORK FOR PEACE

Miss E. Hunt.

Miss A. Brooks.

TWO RADCLIFFE GRADUATES.

The Baccalaureate Sermon Warns Them to Beware of Aristocracy of Letters.

Radcliffe seniors were told of the mission of the woman of education at Shepard Memorial when they listened to the baccalaureate sermon preached by the Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham.

"The worst kind of aristocracy, perhaps, is the aristocracy of letters," the preacher told them. "It is not so vulgar as that of wealth, but there is less excuse for it, and oftentimes it is no less selfish, narrow and exclusive.

"Education should teach us self-control, which is the greatest possession in the world.

"It is to the women that we ought to look in these days of shiftless social standards for a new and vehement adherence to the things that remain forever right. The time has surely come when our colleges should send forth men, as well as women, who are pledged by training and conviction to the cause of peace and international good will."

Miss Gertrude Cook's baccalaureate hymn was sung to the tune of "Austria." Its last two stanzas:

Dew of peace, rain of ambition, beams of love to warm the soil;
If thou, Lord, grant not thy favor, fruitless is our anxious toil,
Free our fields from weeds of evil, briars of self and tares of pride;
Shield them in the shock of tempest, turn from them all blight aside.

Grant us in the season's progress flower of beauty, fruit of deed,
Fruit to feed the hungry peasant, yielding for the future seed
That, when falls life's winter silence, and our fields are white and bare,
We may carry to thy garners grain that thou wilt treasure there.

SAILORS, GIVEN UP, REACH PORT

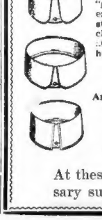

Captain Edward Jameson of the fishing schooner Mattie D. Brundage was surprised when his vessel docked at T wharf to see two men, John Olson and Peter Anderson, for whom the schooner's flag was at half mast. It was thought they had perished from exposure after being separated from the schooner off Cape Cod. The two men had suffered terrible hardships for two days in an open boat without food or water before they were picked up.

The men left the schooner on Sunday, June 19, in a dory. Shortly afterward a fog swept in from the ocean, blotting the schooner from their sight. For hours they pulled the dory about trying vainly to locate their vessel. They finally were rescued by a coastwise schooner.

NO MERCY TO BE SHOWN GRAFTERS IN EQUITABLE

Neither Wealth Nor Influence Will Prevent Prosecution, Says Attorney-General.

Hyde, Alexander, Krech, Depew, Harriman and Schiff Among Those Threatened.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 26.—Prosecution now threatens a dozen or more officials and directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, who are accused of having used their positions as trustees of the interests of the 600,000 policy-holders to swell their own bank accounts.

This was determined upon by Attorney General Mayer after a three-hour conference with Superintendent of Insurance Hendricks. They have made up a long list of men who will have to defend their actions in court.

James W. Alexander, the former president of the Equitable, and James H. Hyde, the youthful vice-president, have been, up to this time, the men who have borne the brunt of the attacks, but now the State authorities are bent upon making every man suffer, and it is learned that prosecutions are being considered against all the men who have been named as profiting by the underwritings of the "James H. Hyde and Associates" syndicate.

Prominent Men on List.

Among these men, as indicated in the report of the superintendent of insurance, is Valentine P. Synder, president of the National Bank of Commerce, who made only $1,510 from the single syndicate in which he participated, but who is said to have profited enormously by the deal through which the Equitable merged the Western National Bank and the National Bank of the United States.

Alvin W. Krech, president of the Equitable Trust Company, who made $3,000 through the Hyde syndicates, but whose profits through the reorganization of the Equitable Trust are said to have been many times that figure, is another.

William H. McIntyre, fourth vice-president of the Equitable at a salary of $30,000 a year, whose syndicate pickings were $14,420, and whose profits in countless other transactions that are said to have been detrimental to the policy holders' dividend account, amounted to tens of thousands of dollars, is on the list also.

$12,000 a Year Not Enough.

Judge H. Squire, former financial manager, now retired on a pension of $1,000 a month, who, not content with his salary of $12,000 a year, made in the Hyde syndicate operations $14,420, and also enormous sums by the acquisition of stock in the Equitable and other subsidiary concerns, is mentioned.

Another is Gen. Louis Fitzgerald, for many years president of the Mercantile Trust Company, now aged and infirm but enormously wealthy, who added to his bank account $2,284 through the Hyde syndicate business, and who has, it is charged, shared in all the profitable undertakings of Alexander-Hyde regimes for the past fifty years.

May Name Two Counts.

These men, including Hyde and Alexander, are likely to be prosecuted on at least two counts: First, malefeasance in office and violation of the general law, which makes it a misdemeanor to improperly manage trust funds; second, violation of Section 36 of the insurance law of the State, which prohibits officers or directors of a life insurance company profiting from the sale of any securities to or negotiating any loans for their company.

Senator Depew, Edward H. Harriman and Jacob H. Schiff are not free from the danger of being dragged into the prosecutions.

Powerful political influences are being exerted, but it was declared at the office of the attorney general that he will be as merciless in his arraignment as Hendricks was in his examination, and that he will allow no man, however wealthy or influential, to escape prosecution.

Attorney General Mayer and Superintendent Hendricks will tomorrow submit their conclusions to Governor Higgins for his approval.

One of the men who has profited greatly by the liberality of the old Equitable management, and who admits it, is Dr. Edward Curtis of No. 33 West Sixty-ninth street. Dr. Curtis is an old man and very feeble. For twenty-six years he was the medical director of the company, with a salary of $15,000 a year.

Last year he had a paralytic stroke, which incapacitated him from attending to even the nominal duties that the company demanded of him. He was retired early last year, but it was arranged that his salary should continue until the close of the calendar year, when he should receive a pension.

GENERAL AGENTS EQUITABLE SEEK TO BE DIRECTORS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 26.—Under the plan adopted by the trustees of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the election by policy-holders of a majority of the board of directors, it is likely that a number of general agents of the society will secure election to the board.

The printed blanks distributed among the policy-holders for the election contain no names save those of the three trustees—Grover Cleveland, Judge Morgan J. O'Brien and George Westinghouse. The policy holders are left free to name any one they see fit.

Each general agent is in charge of a district of considerable extent, and the policy holders in that district look to him to protect their interests.

In anticipation of this, a number of general agents have been searching the market for stock so that they may qualify as directors. Several have secured the necessary five shares, and brokers acting for other wealthy agents are making a canvass for shares.

$4,000 to $5,000 a Share.

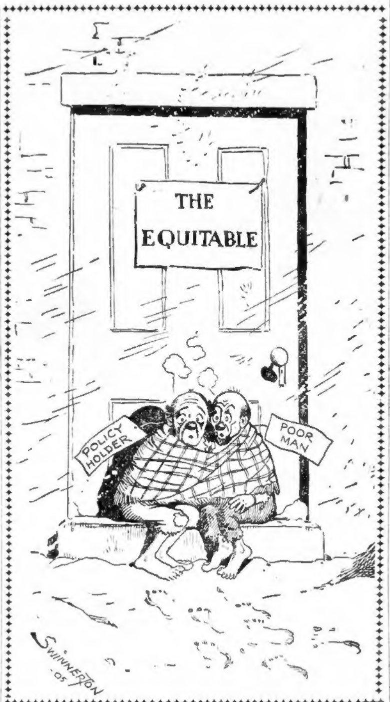

There are about sixty shares of Equitable tock in the market. A few months ago this could have been bought for $3,000 a share, but is held now at between $4,000 and $5,000 a share.

Edward M. Peck of No. 220 Broadway announces that he has fifty shares for sale and has been offered $4,700 a share, but he is holding for a higher price. In view of the privileges which possession of the stock carries wit hit, the broker is likely to secure the higher price.

FIRE UNDER CAR CAUSES PANIC

Fire started under a car just after an elevated train left Dover street last evening, sending a shower of sparks into the street. There were cries of "Fire!" which the motorman heard but did not understand, and then there was an explosion which was heard for blocks and greatly frightened the passengers in the car. One woman fainted.

When the motorman heard the sound of the explosion he stopped the train, and the passengers madly rushed from the blazing car. The fire was more spectacular than dangerous, however, and was put out by the motorman with an extinguisher.

MISS DRAPER WEDS TO-NIGHT

Harvard graduates and Cambridge society people are interested in the marriage to-night of Miss Ella Frances Draper, daughter of the late Dr. Daniel F. Draper of Cambridge, to Wendell David Rockwood, of the firm of Rockwood and MacIntire, Boston.

Both are well known in Cambridge and have hosts of friends. The wedding will be at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. E. H. Cobb, of No. 7 Avon street. The Rev. James Reed of the Swedenborgian Church of Boston will officiate. The ceremony will be private, followed by a reception, for which 400 invitations have been issued.

Misses Ruth and Winifred Cobb are to be bridesmaids and Frank P. Thomas best man. The ushers are all Harvard graduates: Dr. William Hanson of Cambridge, the Rev. Laurence Hayward of Marlboro, Melville Smith of Boston and Charles M. Draper of Roxbury.

After a wedding trip through the White Mountains the couple will be at home in the fall at No. 8 Avon street.

50 WOMEN KISS FORMER RECTOR

PITTSFIELD, June 26.—Fifty women of St. Stephen's Church kissed the Rev. Dr. William Newton, on the Union Station platform, when he passed through here on his way from Boston to Saratoga. He was formerly their rector, and it was the first time they had seen him in five years. He now makes his home in Dinan, France.

WED AND WENT BACK TO SCHOOL

Grace McGeoch, aged eighteen, a graduate of the Roxbury High School last year, and George Whitman, aged 19, who was graduated from the English High School on Friday last, have been man and wife for a year. Only they and their parents knew of this, however, as the marriage had been kept secret until the groom should be graduated.

"I suppose they wanted to be smart and do something different from other people," is the explanation offered by the mother of the girl, who says the parents had no objection to the union. During the past year the young woman has lived at her home, No. 473A Dudley street, and her husband with his parents, No. 61 Harvard avenue.

The young couple have now left town and their parents refuse to tell where they have gone. They explain that the groom has secured employment, but state that they expect him to return to Roxbury soon with his wife.

FLOOD CAUSED BY A RUNAWAY AUTO

A runaway automobile wrecked a hydrant in Dorchester yesterday afternoon. The result was a spectacular geyser and a lot of flooded cellars. The auto had been left standing at the corner of Greenbrier and Bowdoin streets, with the brake unset, while its occupants, a young man and woman, made a call. During their absence the auto started down the steep hill of Greenbrier street.

Unless the Weather Man should again decide on a shower, the Champs and Highlanders will play their second game at the Huntington avenue grounds this afternoon.

With Winter in form Collins thinks that his aggregation will come pretty near clipping the Highlanders' wings again this afternoon. But as Powell, the mighty twirler of the New Yorks, will face them in the pit, they will have to be right on edge if they hope to land the game. Jack is pitching mighty nice ball of late, and, although he hasn't got the salivated curvlet down as pat as some of the other big guns, he has terrific speed, backed up by a good assortment of curves. Powell has shown much better control this season than he did last, also.

Manager Griffith said this morning to a representative of the BOSTON AMERICAN that Kid Elberfeld may get back into harness this afternoon, and if he is right he will certainly make things hum around shortstop district. Yeager has proved an excellent utility infielder, but has not quite the class that Elberfeld possesses.

Doc Newton, the ex-Brooklyn pitcher signed this Spring by Griffith, wired the New York manager this morning from Gotham that he would join the team this afternoon. Newton was with the Highlanders early in the season, but was taken sick and was forced to return to his home in Ohio. In his telegram he states that he is in fine fettle and ready to step into the box at a moment's call.

The grounds were somewhat soggy after the brisk shower this morning, but the groundskeeper soon had the puddles cleaned up.

HARVARD CREW SHOWS LITTLE IMPROVEMENT

HARVARD CREW QUARTERS, RED TOP, June 26—Despite the many reports that have been circulated during the past few days that the Harvard varsity crew has shown great improvement since coming to the Thames, it is not hard to see that the improvement is very small, and experts cannot figure where the Cambridge boat will have a look in with Yale.

The four is just about the same, no marked improvement and no serious retrogression. If, finally, there is one spark of advancement it has fallen to Georgie Ball's freshman four, about which the majority of people who follow the races here will never so much as trouble themselves.

The freshmen took a bad slump during the middle of the week; they lost all their power and speed, and the boat showed woful lack of drive. The last two days, however, have been a distinct improvement all the way through the stroke. Parke, after two days' trial, was sent to the four. He appeared a smoother oar than Fahnestock, but in all around ability he did not make good, and Fahnestock was put back. Up to the present the greatest fault with the freshmen has been their tendency to become nervous when they line up against the varsity.

YALE VARSITY MEN ARE FIT FOR STRUGGLE

YALE CREW QUARTERS, GALES FERRY, June 26.—Although they consider the loss of "Con" Daly a severe blow to them, the Yale varsity crew seems confident of beating the Harvard first boat in easy fashion. They are in the best possible condition, and from now on until the call for the race will indulge in but light work, with possibly one exception, that being this afternoon.

It is very probable they will row over the four-mile course to-day in order to find out exactly what the crew can do under the changed conditions in the shell. The improvement noticed in the form of the 'varsity eight at last night's practice has been a source of encouragement to the crew and Coach Kennedy.

There are no further changes contemplated in the make-up of the crews, as the men are all in first-class physical condition, and rowing to the best advantage in the places they now occupy.

The side lanes of blue and crimson flags were put in position over the four-mile course on Saturday. There will be several added restrictions in the policing of the course.

RACES AT SAUGUS TRACK THIS WEEK

After the usual Winter let up and preparation, the light harness sport will be in full operation this present week in New England. The starter's bell call the first class of circuit races at Old Saugus Tuesday and from then the trotters will be busy until the frost of November warns them of another Winter's approach.

Secretary Hitchings has one of the best list of entries ever received for a Bay State track at this season of the year. Eleven classes are on the full programme and four days' racing are assurred.

The character of the entries is of the highest type. A candidate for the M. and M. trotting stake and one for the Chamber of Commerce pacing stake at Detroit are among those named to start at Old Saugus.

In the 2:16 pacing class at Tayntor, who won three races at Baltimore, will be a favorite on performance.

The free-for-all trotting class Thursday will furnish the high class race of the meeting, and it should lay between Lisanero and Paul Kruger.

From Saugus the racers go to Dover, N. H., July 4 to 7. Reports from there state that the fourteen classes have filled with 150 nominations, which include the free-for-all pace.

Many of the horses performing at Saugus and Dover patronize the half-mile tracks of Worcester, Taunton, Nashua, Concord and Rochester. After the week at Dover both Worcester and Taunton have made arrangements for meetings.

'MONK' WINS FINISH FIGHT

PROVIDENCE, June 26.—In the woodlands, in close proximity to the famous Brass Ball stage coach tavern in Scituate, "Monk the Newsboy" won a finish fight of thirteen rounds on the turf from Young Callahan, of New York.

The battle was with small gloves, and it was hotter than the weather, which was 96 in the shade. The fight was for $200 a side and the bantamweight championship of the State. "Monk" showed the effects of good training, and he fought like a gamecock from beginning to end.

The thirteenth round was about half over when two lefts and a straight right on Callahan's jaw put him out of business.

About forty picked sports witnessed the battle.

FITZPATRICK NOT FOR YALE

NEW HAVEN, June 26.—Yale cannot have Keene Fitzpatrick, of the University of Michigan, to succeed Mike Murphy as football and track coach and trainer.

Murphy, who left here with Captain Tom Shevlin, of the Yale football eleven, last week, returned to-day and reported that it was impossible to get Keene away from Michigan. He says:

"Keene is located there, with everything pleasant and just as he wants it, and they say they won't let him go and he says he can't come. So Yale must give up hoping for him."

Murphy also went to the Hill School, Pottstown, Pa., and talked to Mike Sweeney, the Hill School trainer, about succeeding him. Chances are against getting Sweeney also, but it is probable that a formal offer of the position will now be made him.

At Chelsea on Wednesday It Will Be

LANGFORD vs. BLACKBURN

Fight fans who go wild over a clever, hard-hitting exhibition of ring tactics have a treat in store for them on Wednesday night at the Douglas A. C., the big Chelsea club, when Sam Langford and Jack Blackburn wage battle in the main bout of fifteen rounds.

These two men stand in the front ranks of those in their class, and have met the best men in the country, yet the colored fighter has a hard road seeking championship honors on account of the distinction of the color line.

There is no denying the fact that Langford to-day is every bit the equal of Philadelphia Jack O'Brien or any other middleweight in the land, yet he can't get the chance to prove it, but the time will come when he will.

The fact that he has fought three draws with Langford and had the best of it the first time that they met shows his calibre.

Joe Woodman, Langford's manager, says that he is going to send his man in to win by the short route in this fight, as Sam is getting better every day, and decisive victories would be more likely to count in his favor in signing up with the best middleweights in the country.

* * *

Mike "Twin" Sullivan will not go West just yet. He was made the magnanimous offer by Alex Greggains, the California fight promotor, of a purse of $500 to meet Rufe Turner. The Cambridge boy says that he can stay at home and be out less money than to accept such meagre terms.

* * *

There was an attempt to match up Jimmy Briggs and Kid Goodman at the Chelsea Club, but it failed to materialize because Briggs could not make weight low enough for Abe.

The Hebrew chap was willing to allow the blacksmith a few pounds, but was not going to take chances with more than five pounds.

As every time they have met when Briggs was nearer the Kid's weight the bouts resulted in draws, to get them in the ring would mean one of the fastest and most interesting battles that could be put on the local boards.

* * *

At the National Athletic Club, Philadelphia, this evening Jack Johnson, the colored heavyweight champion of the world, who has only lost a single battle in his whole career, and Jack Monroe will engage.

For months Johnson has been dickering to secure some sort of a foothold on the world's title, and since the retirement of Jeff he has redoubled his efforts. Monroe, who has seen him fight, thinks that he can beat the great colored heavy, and jumped at the chance to get into the ring with him.

Monroe and Johnson will meet in a battle that will send the loser to the fighters' graveyard. Knowing this, both men have trained for the fight of their lives. Monroe has secured the services of Fitzsimmons and McCoy, while Johnson has been working with George Cole, Black Bill and others.

* * *

Jimmy Briggs and Beth McLeod are booked for Sydney, C. B., on Saturday night. Briggs in his battle with Kid Coffey showed that he was as strong and as handy as ever. McLeod is the champion lightweight of Cape Breton and of that part of the world. Mike "Twin" Sullivan said the other day that he had a match with McLeod in about two weeks.

Young Erne, who by his brilliant victory over Harry Lewis on Tuesday last, again jumped into the limelight as the best we have hereabouts at 130 pounds, is to be matched to meet either Abe Attell or Young Corbett at the National A. C., Philadelphia, Monday, July 3.

WILLIS TO OPPOSE M'GRAW'S GIANTS

NEW YORK, June 26.—Vic Willis is down on Manager-Captain Tenney's dope book as the firing line artist against the Giants at the Polo Grounds this afternoon, and in all probability Christy Mathewson will be in opposition to the lanky Hubite.

Willis is in better shape now than at any time before this season, and is expected to serve up to the New York batters an assortment of curves and shoots that will keep their batting averages for the day way down.

Mathewson, however, has always been a puzzle for the Boston batters, but this afternoon's performance may find him easy for Tenney's men, as they claim they will knock the sphere all over the lot. They mean to win this afternoon some way.

Tenney is much pleased with the showing his aggregation has been making of late, and feels confident of winning the majority of games from New York, Brooklyn and Philadelphia before returning to the Hub with the Slowtown brigade on July 6.

The Bostons journeyed over to Hoboken yesterday afternoon and trimmed that team to the tune of 3 to 2 in a hard-fought game.

HARVARD BALL TEAM ARRIVES IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, June 26.—The Harvard baseball team arrived here at midnight to play the second game of the series with Yale to-morrow afternoon. The squad is now quartered at the Pequot Club house and will remain there until after the game, when it will disband without returning to Cambridge.

They will practice to-day on Yale Field. The lineup of the Cambridge nine will be exactly as in the last game, with Paul Coburn in much better shape than he was then.

Most Harvard men are well satisfied with the decision to make the Tuesday game the final one. They feel that it is not right to hold the players another week, and, further, that Harvard has a better chance with one game. Coburn can pitch it without saving himself, and Harvard men feel that he can win it in that case. Then the whole team will be nerved up to a higher point and will put up the best game they are capable of. This, say Harvard men, would bring victory.

BIG RACE AT REVERE TRACK

Albert Champion, Bobby Walthour and James Moran are down on the card for a match race at the Revere eight-lap board track next Saturday night.

Both Champion and Moran have been training steadily at the Revere track, while Walthour has been South with MacLean and Bedell. The Southerner is expected to return in a day or two and go to work at the beach track. Reports from the South state that he is in remarkably fine condition and will come North prepared to send Champion back to his automobile supplies and Moran to his milk route.

DONAHUE IS READY TO BOX

Kid Donahue has not been in Philadelphia since April, according to his manager, Martin Clougherty, and he refutes any statements that the Roxbury boy was knocked out recently in Quakertown.

A well-known Roxbury sporting man is willing to post $1,000 that Donahue cannot be knocked out by any boy in his class.

Donahue is doing light training at Nantasket Beach, and is open to meet any boy in the country at 126 to 128 pounds, and is also willing to take on Martin Canole, of Fall River, if he will weigh in at 133 pounds ringside.

WAKEFIELD TO MEET MELROSE

Wakefield High and Melrose High are scheduled to play a Suburban League contest to-day, and if Wakefield wins it will mean the championship. Should Melrose win, however, a three-place tie between Everett, Melrose and Wakefield will result, in which event it is likely that the deciding games will not be played, as the school season will end before the close of the week.

FITZ FEEBLE? SAY SALT LAKE AND SEE

BY TAD.

NEW YORK, June 26.—Did you ever see Fitzsimmons do a Highland Fling? You haven't? Well, go up and whisper Salt Lake in his ear and then you'll see the dance and hear the swellest bunch of language that you ever heard.

The old rock cod has just returned from the Mormon town, and if ever a man came in with his feathers mussed Fitz is that man. He swears by all that is good that Salt Lake has all other towns on the map beaten 456 ways in the line of BUNK.

About a month ago he was offered a go with Mike Schreck at there where Brigham Young held forth, and was asked to put up $1,000 as a forfeit for appearance. Schreck did the same and the money was salted in the mitt of Charlie Essig of Chicago. The club was to come through with a $2,000 forfeit, and then all was to be merry. They told Fitz that the club's money was on the way to the Windy City and he packed up his sweaters and things and beat it to where the big Salt Lake is planted.

He worked four or five days and then began to think that there was something doing.

Willard Bean, who was at one time a parson and later a pug, was the man who was managing the show. He was supposed to have his money up, but Fitz found out that he was shy very hard on the kitty and made an awful howl.

According to his dope now the parson tried to get the forfeit money moved over to the Mormon town, so that they could use it in pulling off the fight and take chances on the house bringing it in again. They never put up their forfeit and had no idea of doing so.

One R. Fitzsimmons immediately pulled on his Sunday pants, called the porter and copped the next train East. Here he is yelling to beat the band now, and killing off Salt Lake as hard as he can.

"I'm not as old as they would like the people to believe," said Fitz yesterday on Broadway. "Just let them get Jim Corbett for me and I'll show them how an old boy can step. I'd like to get any one of the big fellows for that matter. I'm feeling right again now and just ripe for a good fight. Six rounds, ten or twenty for its a matter of supreme indifference to me."

And then he faded down the Rialto like the fog.

The association will add not less than $400 to any over-night race, and on days on which there will be no stake down for decision there will be one race with $800 added, one with $500 added and three with $400 added to each.

KEELER LEADS IN BATTING

Si Seymour of Cincinnati still holds the lead among the batsmen of the National League, closely pressed by Hans Wagner of Pittsburg. Seymour has taken part in every game the Reds have played this season, and up to date has an average of .359 per cent. The Flying Dutchman has played in fifty-seven games with the Pirates and his average to date is .354 per cent.

William Keeler once more has taken the lead in the American League, displacing Eddie McFarland of the Chicago White Sox. Keeler has not missed a game with the Highlanders. His average in fifty-one games is .339.

Lajoie, who led the Americans last season, with Keeler second, pulled up to .311 per cent last week.

AMERICANS TO PLAY SAILORS

A hot game of baseball is looked for to-morrow afternoon, when the BOSTON AMERICAN aggregation of diamond stars line up with the crack nine from the battleship Missouri at the Somerville High School grounds.

Manager Judd, of the Missouri team, would like to arrange games with other strong amateur teams. Letters addressed to him on board the Missouri, Charlestown Navy Yard, will reach him.

IS THE AMERICAN HUSBAND HENPECKED? WHAT'S YOUR CANDID OPINION?

He Does Not Dare to Call His Soul His Own Without Asking His Wife

By Dorothy Dix

IS the American man henpecked?

Sh-sh-s-s-sh, don't mention it, but do you know a single married man who dares to ask an old friend home to dinner without first obtaining his wife's permission?

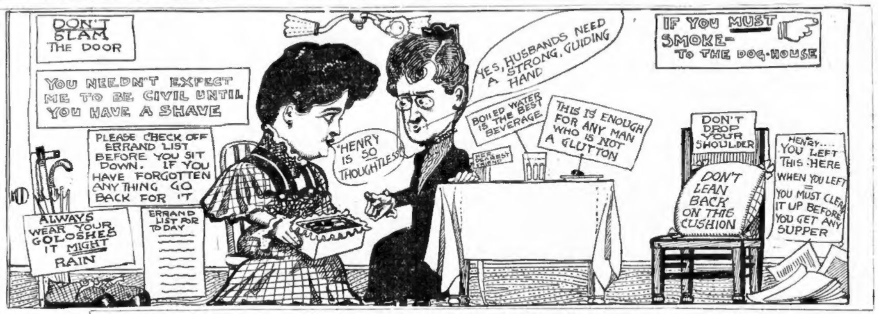

Tell the truth now, ladies. This is the confessional. My husband wouldn't. Neither would yours.

Our transatlantic cousins have a proverb to the effect that an Englishman's home is his castle. It isn't that way in this country. The home is the woman's castle, and the husband exists in it on sufferance. As a tacit recognition of this, a large proportion of American men put their homes in their wife's name, but this is merely a legal technicality, and does not really affect the hen's ability to rule the roost. She does that anyway.

One of the most cherished illusions of man is that he is going to be the head of his own house, but only in very rare and isolated cases is this ambition achieved.

In his bachelor days, when he looked forward to matrimony, he saw himself monarch of the little realm called home, gathered his old friends about his hearthstone, and reveling in the one place in all the world where he could indulge his tastes and whims and absolutely do as he pleased.

By the time he has been married about two years he wakes up to the fact that something has wrecked this dream of bliss. None of his old friends ever come to see him. He knows better than to enter his door without first wiping his feet on the mat, and he wouldn't dare smoke in the parlor, or put his head on a single sofa cushion in the house.

He doesn't have any idea how it all happened, or how it came about that he is so "hacked," as the vulgarians say. He merely realizes that for some reason, unknown to him, his friends are persona non grata to his wife, and that it is far, far wiser and more peaceful for him to be polite to her friend, Mrs. Smith, than to try to get her to be polite to his friend Jones.

It has also been borne in upon him that it is best for diplomatic reasons for a man not to indulge in his whims at home, and "clutter"—the word is his wife's—up the house with his collection of old books, or prints, or pipes.

Of course, he isn't afraid of his wife. Perish the thought! but er—er—things are more comfortable that way.

Besides, he is used to seeing a man take a back seat in his own house. His father did. His brothers do. So do all his friends. He knows that Jones wouldn't any more dare ask him to the Jones flat than he would dare ask Jones to his.

An American man who would dare defy the tyrant on the hearth, and assert his inalienable right to invite whom he pleased to his house, and to have one whole room to himself, in which he could do as he liked and store what he pleased, would be regarded by other married men as a hero who ought to have a medal bestowed upon him for reckless and foolhardy courage.

Public opinion even recognizes the fact that the wife rules the home. If you doubt this, ask yourself if anybody but a raving lunatic would be foolish enough to accept a man's invitation to visit or dine at his home unless it was backed up by his wife's O. K.

Another form of henpecking from which few men escape is the continual correction that most husbands undergo at the hands of their wives. This takes in everything from their morals to their manners, and the way they have their hair cut.

The majority of women treat their husbands as if they were little boys, and stupid little boys at that.

Did you ever watch a little bit of a woman sail into a car, towing a great big, husky, six-foot man behind her, and hear her say, "Now you sit there," to him, as she indicated a seat?

Did you ever see a woman let her husband start off in the morning without giving him a thousand injunctions about not getting his feet wet, or keeping on the shady side of the street or not getting in draughts, or something else, as if he didn't have sense enough to take care of himself?

If a woman believes in early hours, doesn't her husband have to go to bed with the chickens, whether he likes to sit up or not? If she is a prohibitionist, doesn't he have to gorge himself on cloves if he takes a glass of beer? If she is a dyspeptic and has no appetite, doesn't he have to fast?

I know a man who is very clever and outside of his home is as bold as a lion and who is at the head of a big business that he has built up by his own sagacity and good management, but who never gets enough to eat at his own table because when his wife considers he has had enough she calls time on him, and at her, "There, dear," he drops his knife and fork as if he had suddenly discovered that the food before him was poisoned.

She says she does this for his own good. So say all the dear ladies who feel it their sacred duty to boss their husbands, but one wonders what would happen if the thing were reversed in the domestic barnyard. Suppose husbands should decide that they knew how women should comb their hair, what colors they should wear, and how their gowns should be made! Suppose a husband should interfere with his wife's chocolate creams and sodas, and tell her how bad everything that she likes to eat is for her digestion! Dear me, what a stampede there would be to the divorce court.

Of course, no man is going to admit that he is henpecked. Certainly not. He merely obeys his wife because he likes to, and when he comes home late at night and pulls off his shoes at the front door it isn't because he is afraid, but because he doesn't want to wake the poor dear up from her beauty sleep.

Nor does he sing small around his own house because he dares not crow. It's because his voice is out of tune, and the reason that he stays at home and works while his wife is in Europe or by the sea is merely because he enjoys labor and doesn't like vacations, anyway.

To this defferential attitude of the husband to the wife we apply the euphonious term of chivalry, and if American men are not henpecked then they are the most—er—er—chivalrous men in the world.

What and How to Feed Baby During the First Summer

Safe Rules for Every Young Mother to Follow

GREATER mistakes in the feeding of infants are made by the parents through ignorance than through intention. Young mothers do not realize what a matter of importance the diet of their children is.

Two facts should be ever present in the mind when considering the feeding of babies:

First—Of children born of healthy parents and nursed by their mother, very few die during the first year of life.

Second—Of children artificially fed in institutions and in tenements, very few survive the first year.

In these two facts there is consummate proof that mother's milk is the ideal food for infants.

The mother who nurses her child should first and foremost keep herself in perfect condition. She should be very careful as to her diet and habits of life. Whatever ills she is subject to during this period are apt to be suffered by the child.

There should be three plain, well cooked meals every day; consisting largely of milk, meat, vegetables and cereals. Beer and tea are both harmful, and should be let alone. Any quantity of either is positively dangerous to the child.

The rules set down by the authorities of the Babies' Hospital of New York for the times and quantities babies should be fed at their different ages are accurately quoted here:

From birth to third month the baby should be nursed at two and one-quarter hour intervals during the day. Nine nursings in twenty-four hours with one nursing between 10:30 p. m. and 6 a. m.

Third to sixth month. The nursings should be at three-hour intervals during the day; seven to eight nursings in twenty-four hours, with one night nursing.

Sixth to ninth month. The child now takes a larger quantity at each feeding and the night nursing is not necessary. He should be nursed at three to three and one-half hour intervals; six nursings in twenty-four hours.

Ninth to twelfth month. The nursings should be at three and one-half hour intervals, five nursings in twenty-four hours.

When a mother cannot nurse her child and it has to be brought up on a bottle these rules are slightly varied.

The bottle should be thoroughly cleansed with borax and hot water (tablespoonful of borax to a pint of water) and boiled before using. The nipple should be turned inside out, scrubbed with a brush, using hot borax water. The brush should be used for no other purpose. There should be three or four sets of bottles and nipples. The bottles and nipples should rest in plain boiled water until wanted. Never use grocery milk. Use only bottle milk which is delivered every morning. The milk should be boiled five minutes immediately after receiving. The feeding hours are the same as when nursed by the mother. Children of the same age vary greatly as to the strength and amount of food required. For the average baby the following mixtures will be found useful. A mixture, when prepared, should be put in a covered glass fruit jar and kept on the ice.

For a child under three months of age—Nine ounces of milk, twenty-seven ounces of boiled water, four teaspoonfuls of granulated sugar. Feed from two to four ounces at two and one-quarter hour intervals; nine feedings in twenty-four hours.

Third to sixth month—Eighteen ounces of milk, thirty ounces of barley water, six teaspoonfuls of sugar. Feed four to six ounces at three-hour intervals; seven feedings in twenty-four hours.

The barley water is prepared by boiling a tablespoonful of barley flour in one pint of water for twenty minutes. Strain and add water to make one pint.

Sixth to ninth month—Twenty-four ounces milk, twenty-four ounces barley water, six teaspoonfuls granulated sugar. Feed six to eight ounces at three-hour intervals; six feedings in twenty-four hours.

Ninth to twelfth month—Thirty-eight ounces milk, twelve ounces barley water, six teaspoonfuls of granulated sugar. Feed seven to nine ounces at three and one-half hour intervals; five feedings in twenty-four hours.

When even water is given to a child to drink it should first be boiled. Every day a mother should boil two quarts of water in a clean vessel, then set it in a cool place and keep it tightly covered, using only this for the child when it is thirsty.

When the mother cannot afford to buy bottled milk from the wagon, when she has no ice chest or cannot afford to buy ice, she should not attempt cows' milk feeding—canned condensed milk may be used as a substitute during the hot months only. The can, when opened, should be kept in the coolest place in the apartment, carefully wrapped in clean white paper. The feeding hours are the same as for fresh cows' milk.

Under three months of age—One-half to one teaspoonful condensed milk; boiled water, two or three ounces.

Third to sixth month—Condensed milk, one to two teaspoonfuls; boiled water, three to five ounces.

Sixth to ninth month—Condensed milk two to three teaspoonfuls; boiled water, five to eight ounces.

Ninth to twelfth month—Condensed milk, three teaspoonfuls; boiled water, eight to nine ounces.

OMELETTE MAKING

JAN omelette is quickly prepared, and there is no nicer desert. First of all, the making of the omelette is an art. The French enjoy the reputation of making the best omelette, and this is their method.

They never fail to have it the right shape, which is high in the centre and pointed at the ends. It should be soft inside, with a surface slightly browned and crisp; while the texture is like scrambled eggs. If the color is not quite right, a clever cook can lift the omelette and allow a little butter to run under and brown it when cooked.

The first essential is to have a perfectly smooth pan; and French people never wash their omelette pan. They scour it after each using with salt and vinegar, and rub it dry with a clean cloth. Just before using it should be scrubbed with dry salt to make it more smooth. It is a mistake to make a large omelette: better make several containing two or three eggs each.

Beat the eggs only enough to break them. A good rule is twelve beats. Add a half teaspoonful of salt and a half teaspoonful of butter. A teaspoonful of milk is thought by some people to improve the omelette.

Have a pan evenly hot, but not scorching, melt a teaspoonful of butter quickly on the bottom, and turn in the eggs. Press the eggs from the sides so that the uncooked part will run to the bottom, and, while the top is still soft, slip a knife under and carefully roll the omelette to the centre.

Before doing this spread it over with a layer of jam.

Where a sweet omelette is desired the salt is omitted and sugar is used instead.

The omelettes should be served the instant they are cooked.

KEEP CHEESE COVERED

ALWAYS keep cheese well covered in a cheese dish, or it will become dry and tasteless. If the cheese is wrapped in a cloth moistened with vinegar it will keep beautifully moist and retain its flavor longer.

SCARLET LIES By X and Z, Authors of "Married to Mystery"

CHAPTER CXV.—Continued

"THEN no harm's done—eh?"

"Not so far. But, look here, what are you up to?"

"Never you mind about that. I've got a lien on your services for the balance of six months, according to the agreement."

"Yes. I'm not going back on that. What do you want me to do?"

"You said yesterday you were willing to go back to the circus ring, didn't you?"

"Yes; but I've changed my mind," said George. "Mr. Bienheim has been lecturing me. I think Bella and I will travel a bit. I'm anxious to see two or three more places before I die."

"Travel—eh?" Obviously, the idea rather surprised Mr. Braine. "But wait a moment," he said. "Where do I come in?"

Suppose I Object?"

"Object all you like," said George angrily, "I don't mind."

"But what about the agreement?"

"Hang the agreeent! Here, how much do you want to tear it up?"

"Ah, that's more like business!" exclaimed Mr. Braine; and his little pale-blue eyes glittered with avarice.

"How would $5,000 suit you?" asked George. "That ought to cover your possible losses, surely!"

"I'm not so sure of that," replied the wily Fergus Braine. "You see you're a valuable property, sir."

"Well, name your price," said George, irritably. "I'm not going to haggle. Hang it all, I can afford to give you what you like."

"It isn't so much money," said Braine, "I want you to do something for me."

"Anything in reason," he answered.

"My terms, sir," said Braine, speaking slowly and deliberately, "are as follows: I will return the agreement and call everything off between us for the sum you name—$5,000—coupled, however, with a condition."

"What's the condition?" asked George eagerly.

Fergus Braine stroked his nose meditatively, and closely scanned Holland's open and honest face.

"Do you remember, Mr. Holland," he said, "the extraordinary events of last Christmas night?"

George started, and for a moment his eyes dropped beneath Braine's stony gaze. In a flash that interview he had had with Braine at the King's Head at Mapelia came back to him. All the suspicions which had come to him then returned.

"What are you driving at?" he asked, almost sullenly, and even as he spoke he remembered that he was actually repeating his words of that day.

Braine smiled blandly.

"I can see," he said, "that you have not forgotten."

"Forgotten what?" asked George with a sudden access of defiance.

"Karl Karoff's marvellous escape from the police and the great Detective Gerrard on Christmas night," said Fergus Braine.

"I don't see what that's got to do with you," answered George.

"As a matter of fact, it has a great deal to do with me," said Braine. "So much indeed that if you will tell me truthfully exactly all you know of the events of in the strictest confidence, of course—I shall be pleased to give you back your agreement and your complete liberty. What do you say?"

"Surely," added Fergus Braine as George did not reply, "surely you cannot consider my terms excessive, when you realize what I might have made out of your services during the remainder of the six months still unexpired? What do you say, sir?"

George's brow contracted.

"I don't know," he said doubtfully. "I don't know what you're driving at. What has it got to do with you what happened on Christmas night, I'd like to know? I don't see that it is any concern of anybody's."

"You leave that to me," said Braine. "Don't you trouble about that part of the question at all. All I want you to do is just to be perfectly frank and open with me. I have already told you that what you tell me shall be in the strictest confidence. You can rely upon that, sir."

George smiled rather dubiously. Perhaps he was thinking that a man would be very big fool to rely on anything that this shifty and oily Fergus Braine said or did.

His thought had flown back to that day when, on the verge of financial ruin and destitution, he had gone to the hotel at Mapelia and seen Mr. Selwyn. He remembered exactly how Mr. Selwyn had struck him then—the bald head and hairless face, the lashless, red-rimmed eyes, like pale agates shot with blood.

He remembered so well, too, Mr. Selwyn's cordial greeting: "You're a man in ten thousand, Mr. Lang," he had said. "You have a value if you only play your cards properly—a value far in excess of a second-rate travelling circus menagerie like Revelle's!"

How his heart had leaped at the flattering words of the man he had then believed to be a great agent! He had answered them gloomily enough, though, little dreaming what the next few hours held in store for him.

"Beggars can't be choosers," he had retorted. "How's it to be done? I'm game for anything. I'm dead broke. Give me a position and I'll be your slave for life." Yes, he had said that. He remembered every word. No need for Fergus Braine to remind him.

"Your Slave for Life!"

He shivered. Somehow or other the words seemed prophetic. Was it possible that at that time Fergus Braine knew who he really was? He remembered, now that he came to go back in his mind, a dozen curious happenings, things to which he had, in his utter unsuspicion, never attributed any special significance. Now they all went to show that, long before Stephen Holland had been so tragically murdered, and his startling confession had been made public, there were people who knew the truth. Was Fergus Braine one of these people?

Then the conversation at the hotel came back to him as if to refute the suggestion.

"Get me a position, and I'll be your slave for life!"

"The position is as good as yours," Mr. Selwyn had said; "but you must wait a bit for it. You are not going to waste your talents any more. I see a great future before George Lang and his lions at the Boston music halls and at the Hippodrome in New York. It is as good as accomplished. You've just got to trust me." And then he had named his generous offer that had seemed to George at the time to be too good to be true.

"And remember," Mr. Selwyn had said, "You belong to me entirely. I want that clearly understood." George remembered every word. There was no doubt about the terms of the bargain. "We will fix a term," Selwyn had continued. "We'll put it at six months. During those six months I shall pay you at least thirty dollars a week, or get you a place worth more, when I shall look for a return for my money."

It was fair enough in all conscience. He had been speechless with delight at the time. If the truth were known, probably that moment was the most supremely happy one of his life because he saw, for the first time, a future stretching before him that was worth living for.

Surely the man was honest then. Surely there could have been no ulterior motive influencing him, and yet—

Yes, that had not been all the conversation. They had had a drink, and Mr. Selwyn had skilfully led the conversation into other channels. The recollection caused Stephen Holland's cheeks to burn. Why, Mr. Selwyn had actually asked him the very same question then that he asked now. He had been cautious and circumspect.

"I know nothing more than any one else," he had said; but Mr. Selwyn had laughed and familiarly nudged him.

"I congratulate you, Mr. Lang," he had retorted. "But if I were in your place I'd see Stephen Holland a very long way before I'd trouble to earn my own living. He owes you a lot; but never mind—you evidently don't wish to take me into your confidence, Mr. Lang, and I certainly don't wish to force you. Anyhow, I congratulate you on the way in which you got Mr. Karl Karoff, or whoever he is, out of his difficulties on Christmas night."

Of course, it was all clear now. Selwyn had known who he was all the time. He had not challenged the statement then; he had practically admitted the charge in his embarrassed surprise.

"I Know Lots of Things,"

Mr. Selwyn had said, in that mysteriously cryptic manner of his, "lots of things about you and your mother, and Miss Judith Mort"——

There was not a shadow of doubt about it now. All the old suspicions of that moment came back to him, but at the same time much more caution.

"Come, sir," said Braine; "why do you hesitate? Surely my question is a reasonable one, and surely my terms are fair?"

"It seems to me," said George, "that you can tell me far more about the affair than I can."

"Possibly," said Mr. Braine; "but as to that I cannot say until I know how much you do know."

George shook his head.

"I'm not going to say a word until I know your game," he said.

Braine looked grave.

"I assure you," he exclaimed, "that I am merely asking these questions as I did then, from motives of pure curiosity. I had an idea at the time, and I still have that idea, which is that I could, were I in the place of that much-advertised and much over-rated gentleman, Detective Gerrard, solve one or two mysteries which have for some months puzzled the public and baffled the police.

AID TO THE LOVELORN

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm twenty-two, and kept company with a young lady until about a year ago, when she left me through no cause. Every time she meets me she stops and talks of old times. Would it be proper, the next time we meet, to have her explain and then renew the friendship, as I like her ways very much?

H. W. F.

I CERTAINLY would ask her to explain her conduct. She evidently wishes to renew the friendship. It may be that she took offence at some fancied grievance. Probably an explanation can straighten matters.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I was out the other evening with a young lady. She took my arm, and we walked until we came near a certain corner. She then stopped and requested permission to withdraw her arm, stating that there were certain young men on the corner, who, if they saw her holding my arm, would circulate false stories. "What could they say?" queried I. "Why," answered she, "the fact of my holding your arm is a positive indication of our marriage engagement. As a matter of fact, a young lady should not take a gentleman's arm in public unless she is engaged to him." Now, Miss Fairfax, is this true? It was my impression that if a young lady held a gentleman's arm it signified nothing. Will you kindly enlighten me?

ANXIOUS.

I NEVER heard of such a thing and am sure it is nonsense. A man offers his arm to a woman purely as a matter of courtesy. If the average man were to be considered engaged to every woman who takes his arm things would be in a fine state of confusion.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I keep company with my girl friend's brother. My girl friend always calls for me because I always wait at my house for her, but she gets very angry because I don't go to her house, as does her mother. But my reason for not going is because I imagine her brother might think me running after him, so I keep away as much as possible. Kindly give me your advice on the matter, as I would not like to give her up and, at the same time, do not want to give my friend the least impression that I am running after him.

JOSIE.

I THINK you are quite right. There is no harm in your going there once in a while, but it is far better that you keep away from the house while he is in it. If you do go, time your visits so that he will not be home. The mother and sister would be the first ones to say you were running after him if you went too often. It would be too bad to lose your girl friend, but it would be worse to lose your self-respect. If I were you, I would tell her just how you feel about it. In the meantime, keep on just as you are doing; you are quite in the right.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We have a little girl of six years, and my wife, who is twenty-eight, keeps books for a business man of forty, unmarried, who is located near our home. This man also owns a farm located about four miles out in the country, and has occasion to visit it about one evening each week, driving there and back. On such trips my wife accompanies him, returning between 10 and 11 p. m. We have had several harsh words on account of these trips, she telling me that I am selfish and unreasonable in objecting to her going for a ride with him, while I, on the other hand, contend that it is very much out of place for a married woman, and if continued is sure to cause more or less gossip.

W. H. B.

I THINK you are right. Her driving with him every week is sure to cause unkind criticism. It is too bad that you cannot arrange so that she will stay home and look after her house and baby. It is always more or less unsafe to place a woman in the position she now occupies. There is the danger of her growing interested in her employer and of his caring too much for her. Regarding the drives, I would stop them at once if I were you. You see, as she is an independent, self-supporting woman, it naturally follows that she feels at liberty to do as she pleases.

Beatrice Fairfax Tells Women the Secret of Youth

You Should Keep Your Minds Alert and Interested

THIS article is for girls of twenty-eight and over.

Those who are younger need not read it, as it does not apply to them.

When a girl reaches that age, and is not married, nor engaged, the dread words "old maid" loom large and terrible before her.

She is so afraid that she will be an old maid that she begins to look and act the part long before there is any necessity for so doing.

Her very dread of the thing she would avoid drives her toward it.

The women of to-day do not marry nearly as young as did their grandmothers, and no girl of twenty-eight need jump to the conclusion that she will be an old maid.

However, in case that undesirable contingency should occur, it is well to be prepared to meet it in the right spirit.

Make up your mind that if you should be an old maid you will be a popular one.

Don't be cranky and prim and narrow-minded. The reason more girls of twenty-eight and thirty don't marry is because they let themselves grow narrow and set in their ways.

They lose all their girlishness. They grow old both mentally and physically long before they need to.

What they should do is to keep their bodies young and supple by exercise and healthy living, and their minds young and stimulated by keeping their eyes open, and being interested in their fellow-beings.

I would advise all girls of twenty-eight to give themselves a mental overhauling.

Let each one say to herself, "I wonder if I am growing cranky? Am I getting into a rut and thinking that there is only one way to do a thing, and that way is my way?"

Just because a girl is thirty or over is no reason why she should give up going about and enjoying herself.

If she makes up her mind to be young she will seem young.

I would not have her kittenish or silly; nothing is more objecitonable than a woman of thirty acting like a girl of eighteen, but neither would I have her act years older than there is any necessity she should.

Far more women are too old for their age than too young.

There is no age at which a woman may not be charming if she goes the right way about it.

This is demonstrated by the fact that no great writers have ever agreed as to what is woman's best age. They place it all the way from twenty to fifty.

If you have lost the bloom of twenty you must cultivate some charm to take its place.

When a woman does not marry she frequently settles down into a dull, gray existence, with no interests save in herself, a moderate amount of charity work, and her neighbors' business.

It is all very well to be interested in self to a certain degree—we all are that—but her charitable work would be far better done were she to broaden her horizon a trifle, and her neighbors will like her quite as well if her interest is confined to themselves, not to their business.

I hope the day will come when the unmarried woman will make herself such a beloved and important factor in the world's work that the term "old maid" will be consigned to oblivion.

Dear girls, I sincerely trust that all of you will be happily married.

This talk is only intended to comfort you in case you should not, and to help some of you to keep from becoming old before your time.

Do keep your hearts sweet and young and your minds alert and interested.

And let me tell you that by so doing you will stand ten times a better chance of marrying than if you allow yourselves to grow rusty and uninteresting.

Hearst's Boston American Pattern

What the Housewife Wants for Dusting Day

No. 2,831—Did you ever surprise Phyllis in her dusting cap and apron? There never was a picture more charming. Covered from top to toe, her eyes sparkle from beneath the frill of the dainty cap and her rosy cheeks bespeak the exertion of wielding the broom. The dusting cap and apron are not only becoming, but absolutely indispensable to the good housewife. One cannot always change her gown to do a little cleaning, nor can one have her house gowns always filled with dust. The accompanying cut shows an apron which covers one entirely, even to the sleeves. It is simple in construction and very much liked. Five and three-fourths yards of 36-inch material are required for the medium size.

Pattern No. 2,831 is in one size.

Send 10 cents to obtain this pattern, postpaid, and the size, name and address to HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 230, Boston, Mass.

HOW ENGLAND'S QUEEN LOOKS ON THE BACK OF A DONKEY

King Edward's Consort Has One of the Most Enjoyable Trips of Her Life.

Photographs of incidents of the recent visit of King Edward and Queen Alexandra to Gibraltar have just been received in this country.

The Queen is reported to have a delight almost girlish in the trip and the many exciting experiences which fell to her lot.

None will probably be recalled by her with more enjoyment perhaps than the picnicking party in the Spanish cork woods near Algeciras, which she helped to make up.

It is not a long journey to Algeciras from Gibraltar. Her Majesty was attended by the Duke of Medina Cliel. Like the others she rode on the back of a donkey. Probably no more interesting picture has ever been taken than that of Queen Alexandra on the docile little animal just after her arrival at the Almoraima cork woods. The party rode leisurely through the delightful scenery. Few women would have been able to maintain their dignity on donkey-back, but as the picture shows it did not interfere in the slightest degree with the royal bearing of the Queen.

TROLLEY JUMPS TRACK; FIVE WOMEN HURT

Car Crashes Into Electric Light Pole, Which Prevents It Going Over Bank.

LIST OF INJURED.

Mrs. Thomas J. Burton, aged fifty, 26 Ord street, Salem, internal injuries, badly bruised on body and head. Condition critical.

Mrs. H. C. Dobson, Cambridge, boarding at 297 Washington street, Lynn, ribs and collarbone broken, bruises on chest.

Mrs. C. E. McMann, 27 Wheeler street, Lynn, bruises on head and hands.

Mrs. Dr. Batchelder, Lynn, left arm broken, head and shoulders bruised.

Mrs. Ames, Lynn, arms and body bruised.

SOUTH PEABODY, June 26.—Five women were seriously injured and other passengers badly shaken up by the derailment of an electric car near Brown's pond yesterday afternoon. But for a lucky chance there would probably have been a terrible disaster.

There were forty-six passengers on the car, on the way from Lynn to Peabody. When opposite Brown's ice house the wheels left the track and the car plunged toward a low embankment.

If it had gone over the bank, the consequences would have been awful. Fortunately, the car struck an electric light pole and then a tree, which stalled the wheels. The motorman was thrown over the dashboard and escaped injury.

The passenger most seriously injured is Mrs. Thomas J. Burton, of 26 Ord street, Salem. She is suffering from internal injuries and her condition is critical. She remained unconscious for a long time after the accident.

The passengers most seriously hurt were seated in the front of the car, which was running at high speed. It jumped the rails and struck the pole with terrific force. The car rebounded, and the pole, which had been snapped in two, fell on the roof of the car. The men aboard the car jumped into the road to render assistance to the five women, who had been hurled into a heap. They were removed to the side of the road and made as comfortable as possible.

The accident occurred about a quarter of a mile from a dwelling house, and it was several minutes before medical help could be summoned.

Dr. H. S. Pomeroy of Peabody was the first to arrive and rendered needed assistance.

Mrs. Burton was taken to her home in Salem in an ambulance. The other injured women were taken to Lynn.

The car was in charge of Conductor Keefe, who was also thrown from the car, but not hurt.

Where the accident occurred the railroad curves considerably and as the car was of the four-wheeled type, the wheels did not cling to the rails.

POLICE OF TWO CITIES SEEK GIRLS' HIGH SCHOOL PUPIL

NELLIE FISKE, WHO IS MISSING.

Pretty Nellie Fiske Mysteriously Disappeared After Receiving Strange Letter.

The police of Boston and New York are using every endeavor to find pretty fifteen-year-old Nellie Irene Fiske, a pupil of the Girls' High School, who has been mysteriously missing from her home and her place of employment.

When the recent school year ended she obtained a position as cashier in a store on Tremont street, near Roxbury Crossing. Her mother, Mrs. K. G. Fiske, is visiting in New York, and since her departure from the city the daughter has made her home with C. Stinson, of No. 288 Dudley street, Roxbury. Her father and Mr. Stinson are greatly alarmed over the mysterious disappearance of the girl.

The young woman received a letter Thursday, and seemed agitated when she read it. She made no comment, however, and went about her work at the store as usual. When she did not come home in the evening friends went to the store and learned that she left there early, saying that she was going home. Since then nothing has been heard of the girl.

The thought that she may have gone to New York to see her mother has led her father and Mr. Stinson to call upon the Gotham police, and the local authorities have been asked to assist for fear that she has met with foul play in Boston.

Miss Fiske is large for her age, with fluffy dark hair and blue eyes, and weighs about 125 pounds. When she left home she wore a black dress, a black jacket with a lace collar, and a red hat.

CALVE'S TENOR AN AMERICAN

PAWTUCKET, R. I., June 26.—Berick Schloss of this city, now in Berlin, has been engaged to support Mme. Calve as principal tenor in concert and grand opera for the next three years. This engagement involves a tour of the United States and Canada. Berick Schloss will be known professionally as Beric S. Von Norde. He was born in New York and has lived in Pawtucket fourteen years.

SIX DROWN IN NEW ENGLAND

Six men lost their lives in drowning accidents in New England yesterday, and eight others were saved with difficulty.

Charles D. Grundy, aged 21, of 79 Sterling street, Roxbury, was drowned in the Charles River, close to the old Kenrick bridge, near the Dedham boundary line, meeting death before the eyes of his brother and a chum.

William Schneider, of Westfield, aged twenty-nine, an expert swimmer, attempted to swim across Watershops pond at Springfield. When half way across he cried for help and sank for the last time before his companions, one of whom was his brother, could reach him.

Oswald O. Senesao, aged twenty-two, of East Warren, R. I., was drowned in Kickemuit river while bathing. He dove from a bridge into about twelve feet of water but did not come to the surface.

James A. Bumford, aged 60, an old soldier who has lived at the Soldiers' Home at Togus, Me., since 1883, was drowned by the overturning of a boat in the Togus stream.

Fred W. Thompson, aged 35, of Norway, Me., became excited while trying to land the first fish he had ever caught, and capsized his boat and was drowned in Kezar Lake.

GREAT CROWDS AT THE BEACHES

STEAMERS ARE KEPT BUSY

Nearly four thousand men, women and boys went in swimming at Revere Beach yesterday. During the day there were about 100,000 visitors at the beach.

To the beach yesterday came a party from the West, who for the first time in their lives gazed upon the salt water. They minded not the immense crowds, but stood by themselves and simply watched the breakers coming in and going out.

They told Superintendent West that it was more than they had ever dreamed of. They were taken to the bathhouse and two of the party who were swimmers were induced to don bathing suits and enter the surf.

The Sunday crowds at the beach have been steadily increasing and the trolley company has been compelled to put on all of its extra cars to care for the crowds.

Nantasket had its share and the steamboat company put on every one of its five boats to carry the crowd. Every stretch of the beach was crowded. It is estimated that there were 40,000 people about the beach during the day. The hotels were crowded at the dinner hour.

It was a regular holiday crowd and parents brought all the children from the oldest to the youngest. They picnicked along the sands and had a gala time generally.

Pemberton and Nantasket Point had their share of visitors and the trains were crowded all day.

DOG IN PULPIT POINTS A TEXT

Attendants of St. Mark's Methodist Episcopal Church, Brookline, saw one of the most novel sights ever seen in a church, when Thomas Carlyle Perin, a handsome St. Bernard dog owned by Dr. George L. Perin, occupied a place of honor in the pulpit aside of the pastor, Rev. Dillon Bronson.

"Carl," as the dog is called, proved a very devout attendant, and caused some stir in the church. Dr. Bronson's theme for his sermon was kind treatment of animals, and he had Carl as a living exponent of the high intelligence of dogs.

The dog was to have been led into the church during the offertory by Dr. Perin's little son, Ellwood, eight years old, to whom Carl is very much attached. But Ellwood missed his cue, and instead of leading the dog down the aisle while the offertory was being played he escorted Carl to the platform while Dr. Bronson was in the midst of prayer.

Carl did not make the slightest sound. He lay before the pulpit, crossed his front legs and laid his head upon them, as if in an attitude of devout prayer. He remained in that position until Dr. Bronson had concluded his prayer and then mounted the platform.

During Dr. Bronson's sermon Carl walked about the platform majestically, at times lying aside of the preacher. As the sermon progressed Carl's eyes grew heavy, however, and he went to sleep, to be awakened by a peal of the organ as the recessional was being played. He held his head shame-facedly, but consented to have a reception at the close of the service.

200 WHITE MEN FIGHT BLACKS

GREENWOOD, Del., June 26.—The worst race riot ever known in this section has been going on all night between the whites and blacks, and an effort is being made to rid the town of the latter. The trouble began when a half-witted white man was terrible beaten by three negroes. A dozen negroes were beaten into insensibility during the night and left for dead in the fields. Over 200 whites are engaged in the fighting.

GIRL FARMS FOR AN EDUCATION

HEBRON, Me., June 26.—Geraldine G. Whitman, thirteen years old, is a plucky girl, who bought and is working a farm to pay for her education. She will soon graduate from Hebron Academy and will enter Barnard College in the fall.

She had no money when she proposed to a land agent to buy the farm, but he was impressed with her sincerity and it was transferred to her. Living alone and doing the farm work between school hours and study time, she marketed enough produce to pay her tuition for a year, besides making several payments for the farm. Since she took possession the farm has nearly doubled in value, and a good income has been derived from the orchard and forest of white birch.

EMPLOYE FINDS MOTH PARASITE

A parasite that kills the browntail moth has been discovered in Wakefield by W. W. Whittredge, a town employe. While working in the squad employed to destroy the moths, he has noticed many dead ones recently, and discovered the parasite at work. He turned a number of the parasites over to the State entomologist, and if his beliefs are true, thousands of dollars will be saved to the State in the war against the browntails.

THIEVES LEFT OLD CLOTHES

WEYMOUTH, June 26.—Thieves visited the clothing store of Louis J. Hart, at No. 26 Washington street, and removed goods valued at over $300. They secured entrance through a rear window, fifteen feet from the ground, by piling up dry-goods boxes. In order to carry on their operations quietly they covered the floor with clothing which they did not care to take. They made their departure by a rear door, first dressing themselves in the best clothes in the store, leaving their own worn-out clothing behind.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JUNE 26, 1905.

The Public vs. Mary M. Rogers

Through This Case the Time Will Come When Vermont and Other States Will Not Kill People Legally

Public sentiment in the State of Vermont is changing as to the justice and propriety of taking a woman out on a scaffold and killing her. This change of sentiment is due to the publicity given the case of Mary Rogers.

If, as a result of it, the State of Vermont shall be brought to see the horror of the deed it would have committed but for the interference of the United States Court, Mary Rogers will not have lived, and sinned, and been punished, in vain.

During all the discussion that has arisen over this famous case no one has said that Mary Rogers should not be confined, for the remainder of her life, in some place where she could be cared for and the public protected.

Whether she was entirely sane or not, or whether her crime was defenceless, the fact is unquestioned that she was a party to a most heinous murder. It has never been urged that she should be set free.

The point has been that she should not be hanged—not because she is innocent, but because it is a terrible thing to kill anybody by law, especially a woman, and because for thirteen years Vermont has commuted the sentences of all its murderers.

The BOSTON AMERICAN has been the only newspaper to insist that it was due the people of Vermont that they should hesitate before they committed this deed, the shameful effects of which would be lasting to the State. It has canvassed the opinion of the State, has taken a recent poll of the Legislature, and by publicity endeavored to show the citizens of Vermont just what it was their Governor was allowing to be done, on the plea that "a majority of his constituents desired it."

That this argument is exactly the argument the master of the Roman amphitheatre used when, after finding that a majority of the spectators had turned down their thumbs, he also turned his down as a signal for the defeated gladiator to be put to death, has apparently never occurred to Governor Bell of Vermont.

All the members of the Legislature did not reply. Of those who did several who voted against Mrs. Rogers last Winter, when her case was before the Legislature, now voted for her. Not one who had voted for her reversed his vote.

Throughout the State people who last Winter approved of the course of the Governor are to-day favoring a commutation of the prisoner's sentence. There has been an awakening in Vermont to the fact that the killing of any prisoner is barbarous, and that an execution, by arousing brutal instincts, does more harm than good.

The BOSTON AMERICAN is glad to have assisted in the changing of public opinion by its constant statement of the facts. It is glad to have made it possible for this woman to appeal to the highest court in the land by the subscription for legal expenses which was conducted in these columns.

But the saving of the life of this particular unfortunate, degenerate woman is only an incident in the State's evolution.

The important thing is that public sentiment is changing. The time will come when Vermont, with all other States, will not kill women, nor men either, by law.

Has Business Honor Vanished?

Drastic punishment only can prevent the Equitable infamy from being perpetrated again. Seemingly among too many men of the highest social standing there has ceased to be any sense of responsibility to others, or, indeed, any ethical code whatsoever. Money, the kind of money that persons of more vulgarity, but not any less honesty, call "easy" money, seems to have been what all these eminent gentlemen were looking for. Directors holding no stock, and giving only the most perfunctory attention to their duties, accepted fees of $25 for each meeting which they attended, and in one way or another used the funds of the policy-holders to fill their own pockets. Eminent statesmen, Senators, Governors, prominent journalists, all joined in the loot.

The old idea that honesty is one of the essential qualities of business life seems entirely abandoned to-day. Are we to think that the financial community of New York City, which is rapidly becoming the financial centre of the world, is made up of men with no sense of honor, with no feeling of noblesse oblige? Are the methods of Standard Oil, the Steel Trust, the International Shipping Trust the methods which characterize all of our financiers and their institutions?

If so, what is to check the rising tide of resentment and hostility to the twentieth century captains of industry? Is not Wall Street sowing a wind the reaping of which may sweep away all of its most prominent figures?

The Curse of Substitution

Druggists are generally considered the only objects of this charge, but there are other business concerns that are equally culpable.

If a person goes into a store and asks for a certain proprietary article of known merit, he is informed that there is another "preparation just as good and cheaper." The purchaser is thus cajoled and the honest advertiser who has spent money to get his wares before the public is defrauded.

And this goes in the matter of certain foods that have real merit. Similar articles, but cheaper, under high-sounding names, are offered.

If you know any sort of an article has merit do not be persuaded into buying a substitute.

LET'S HAVE PROTECTION THAT PROTECTS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Suppose we do succeed in getting fireproof cars, what then? It will not do away with accidents like that of the Chicago limited. The open switch in the past has been the cause of many a wreck, and unless the Legislature passes a law to guard switches on the main lines of railroads, we may as well make up our minds to have repetitions of the same accident again and again. I would like to know all how much accidents of this nature have cost the railroads of this country in the past ten years, and what it would cost in wages to guard these switches properly. At whatever cost we must have protection that protects.

DO THE RAILROADS NEED PROTECTION FROM THE PEOPLE?

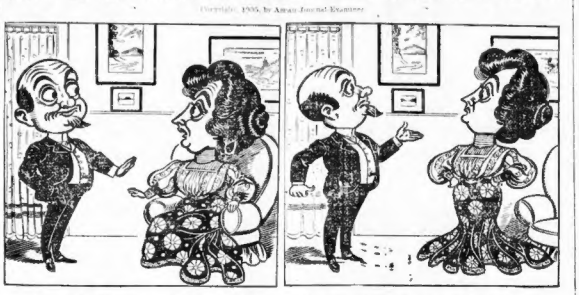

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

"Measurable good will come if officers, intrusted with the duty, will protect the railroads from the people, but will not hedge themselves to do justice to the people." Thus spoke President Roosevelt at Williamstown, as reported by the BOSTON AMERICAN. Now, can anybody protect anybody against the people, and does anybody need to be protected by anybody against the people? Do ever the people, as a mass, revolt or do harm to anybody unless a minority robs or oppresses a majority, so that even the near-sighted has to see it? If the officials pledge themselves to do justice to the people—yes, and do it—then the policeman and the judge will take care of all the protection that is needed.

MRS. E. Z. MARK COLLECTS A BAD DEBT

1—MR. E. Z.—NO! I am not going to sue Skinner for that five hundred dollars. Sharkey, the lawyer, will charge me nearly that much for my lawyer fees and expenses, besides the loss of my time and trouble of attending court. It's an honest debt, I know, but no lawsuits for me.

2—MRS. MARK—E. Z., you are a coward. You assign that account to me. I'll take charge of collecting it and the lawyer's fee also if you promise me the proceeds.

MR. E. Z.—All right, Mary. If you want to rush into trouble I can't help it, but when you get a good dose of it don't come to me for sympathy. I'll assign you the debt.

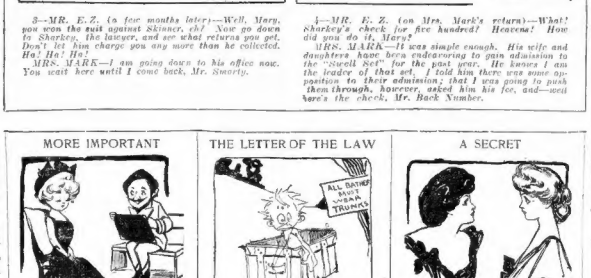

3—MR. E. Z. (a few months later)—Well, Mary, you won the suit against Skinner, eh! Now go down to Sharkey, the lawyer, and see what returns you get. Don't let him charge you any more than he collected. Ha! Ha! Ho!

MRS. MARK—I am going down to his office now. You wait here until I come back, Mr. Smarty.

4—MR. E. Z. (on Mrs. Mark's return)—What! Sharkey's check for five hundred! Heavens! How did you do it, Mary?

MRS. MARK—It was simple enough. His wife and daughters have been endeavoring to gain admission to the "Swell Set" for the past year. He knows I am the leader of that set. I told him there was some opposition to their admission; that I was going to push them through, however, asked him his fee, and—well here's the check, Mr. Back Number.

A SECRET

"Did you tell Mabel of my engagement?"
"Y-e-s; but I told her not to tell it to a soul."
"That's exactly what she says every time she tells it."

SLOW PROGRESS

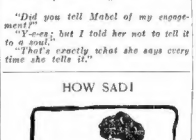

"Is your papa teaching you to be a little man?"
"Yes'm, only the things papa teaches me momma makes me forget."

EASY MONEY

"Wish I had Weary's job."
"Wot!"
"Yep. He gets fifty cents a day for layin' in a hammock in a shop winder to show folks how comfortable it is."

HOW SAD!

"Don't cry, Fannie, Mr. Smather's engagement should not affect you."
"But it does, mamma. Only yesterday I made a scrapp with Ethel that he would propose to me inside of a month."

NOW WHAT D'YE THINK OF THAT?

"He couldn't eat the eggs, you know," Said Brown; "that made him mad.

"He called out the proprietor, Who said, 'Why, that's 2 bad.'"

I'd heard the joke a thousand times, So I thought I'd call him down.

"That egg is ten years old," I said. "So were the eggs," said Brown.

Every Man and Woman Can Lay Hold of a Share of the Energy of Space and Can Use It for Good

PROFESSOR DOLBEAR has astonished the scientific world by declaring that the whole of space is loaded with energy. Every cubic inch of space contains an equivalent of 500-horse power; each cubic foot more than all the steam engines in Massachusetts.

This energy resides in what we call "ether," and out of it come all the forms of energy we know—gravity, light, heat, electricity.

The great reservoir of space makes the supply inexhaustible. An exchange speaking of this says:

"For our purposes energy needs to be adapted. We adapt the energy of coal by employing a steam engine, or adapt the energy of the steam engine to electric work by employing a dynamo; we adapt electric energy to lighting purposes by employing a suitable lamp, and so on. Each form of energy requires some mechanism through which it can act and be transformed, and without mechanism and transformation no phenomenon is possible."

But the fact does not yet strike the mind of the scientific man that we already have a machine, provided by the greatest of all inventors, for adapting all the energy needed for any achievement—and that machine is the man.

Man is a divine machine, formed in triangular shape—body, mind and spirit.

While he is in the frame of this earthly machine, his mind is the engine which must be set in motion to supply the body, through the spirit, with this inexhaustible stream of energy.

Just as science has been astonished by this and other new discoveries in the last ten years, discoveries which have revolutionized the old theories, so will the next ten still further astound the mind of tradition.

We are a part of all this marvellous system of worlds and planets, and this mysterious ocean of space is our mother, and God is our father.

As the children of God and space we can look to our parents for whatever we desire in the way of energy; and energy means power and health and wealth and usefulness to do God's work.

Before any machinist sets his engine working he has first to know something about the engine, how to care for it, and how to keep it in good running order.

Your mind is your engine. Keep it clean first of all. Brush out the dust of worry, and the cobwebs of doubt, and the verdigris of hatred, revenge, envy, jealousy and greed.

Then take a little time, just a few moments each day, and sit very quietly alone with yourself and the engine, and imagine it is drawing energy from space. Remember what science has declared, that space is filled—packed, loaded—with energy.

And remember that you are a child of space, and that whatever you ask of that great mother shall be given you from the mansion of your Father.

Breathe deep and full and slowly, and exhale slowly and think you are drawing in this wonderful energy with each breath, and that it means health, power, usefulness, opulence, wisdom. It does.

After you go out from your room, and about your daily occupations, think that you are giving forth particles of this energy to every one with whom you associate. Rejoice in the thought, for the more you give the more you will receive from space. As fast as you empty your reservoir the divine source will refill it.

If you follow this little lesson faithfully for three weeks' time, never missing one day, you will be told by your friends that they feel better after meeting you. Your presence will cheer the despondent and give new vitality to the sick without any effort on your part.

But beware of boasting of this result when it comes, or indulging any personal vanity or sense of power. For that will act as a leak in your engine, and the power will leave you.

You must remain humble, and reverent, and grateful to the source. You must not think of yourself as a specially favored being, but only as an enlightened one, who has come into the knowledge which is free to every soul on earth.

What the great seers and masters of truth have known since the beginning of time, the scientific world is just learning.

Space is, indeed, packed with energy.

That energy is yours.

Ask and you shall receive.

Sing a Song of Surplus

By James J. Montague

SING a song of surplus—eighty billion bones—
All of which the genial Thomas Ryan owns.
Hendrick's revelations make the owner sore;
This is why the surplus wasn't millions more.

Janitors and office boys got a weekly wage
That would star a chorus girl on the opera stage;
Secretaries gathered in nice emoluments
Such as the United States pays its Presidents!

Sing a song of surplus—what will Ryan do
To cure it with Jones or Smith, or even me or you?
Will Morton's pay be any less than Alexander got?
Will Grover work for two a day and his expenses? What?

Now the pie is opened with a butcher knife,
Who will pluck the plums out? Us! Not on your life!
If Jimmy Hyde could dissipate a billion bucks or two,
What will Mr. Ryan and Paul Morton do?

Sing a song of surplus—on the rebate plan—
Who will get the rebates? Mr. Common Man?
Will they buy the widows clothes and things to eat,
Or will they wash bull markets up and down the street?

Keep on paying premiums; maybe some fine day
You'll get your money back again, if things should come your way.
But if you think that surplus will increase your wealth,
Remember Ryan isn't in the business for his health!

Anything but history, for history must be false.
SIR ROBERT WALPOLE.

Little Editorials from the People

TO HONOR BURR McINTOSH'S GRAVE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Over ninety years ago Captain "Burr" McIntosh, who led his little band of patriots, disguised as Indians, that threw overboard the whole load of tea in Boston harbor, died on the poor farm at Haverhill, N. H., and was buried in a pauper's grave. His was the master mind that framed the project. His act was that of a hero, his motive pure patriotism. It was the first step in the drama of independence. His grave for all this time has been unmarked by monument or urn.

Will not those who love country and a brave act contribute their mite toward the erection of a suitable monument and tablet. Already quite a sum has been raised, and $600 is needed. Contributions should be sent to Charles E. George in care of Woodcliffe N. H. National Bank. Let the move be a national one and the ball started rolling. In dollar subscriptions the fund should be quickly raised.

A STRAIGHT TIP FOR THE MAN THAT "CAN'T FIND WORK"

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

An editorial in the BOSTON AMERICAN tells of the marvelous feeding power of the State of Texas alone. In this connection—the market in nearly all modes of manufacture and trade is glutted with labor seeking work, doesn't this surplus drain off to the land?

Is there any lack of labor force willing to apply itself to the soil? Is capital unwilling to invest in such enterprise? Why?
